BANDIT ROBS GARFIELD BANK

Today

Clemenceau.
$1,000,000 at Poker.
Labor, Capital and Peace.
All Is Comparative.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

YESTERDAY Clemenceau was dying. Doctors said nothing could save him.

The old man who said, "I do not detest men, but I do not like them either," would have been president of France, after the war, but for his hostility to the church.

AS HE lay, beyond hope, according to his doctor, the woman taking care of him, was a Sister of Charity, a nurse to whom he is much attached.

VOLTAIRE, like Clemenceau in thought, would trust only one man to look after his business affairs and buy works of art for him, and that man was a Catholic priest.

VOLTAIRE and Clemenceau have been called atheists, but neither was an atheist, although both refused to accept any one of the "revealed" religions that the masses of men have accepted.

CLEMENCEAU rendered service to his country such as no man has rendered in a hundred years. France will do him justice and ask no questions about his religion.

HISTORIANS of the future, studying our civilization, exploring the fancy writing of "star reporters," will discover these interesting facts:

Professional gamblers and criminals in New York, engaged in a game of cards involving close upon a million dollars in one night. One of the gamblers lost and refused to pay about $300,000, and was murdered.

THEY will read also the guesses of some reporters that witnesses summoned will not tell what they know because the "underworld" tells them to keep their mouths shut or say things that mean nothing. An interesting picture of twentieth century civilization.

THOSE historians of the future will be interested also in today's Chicago courts.

Six captains and twenty other policemen are on trial in the "lost machine graft case." In another Chicago courtroom a police lieutenant and members of his squad are accused of murdering Octavius Granady, a Negro politician.

PRESIDENT HOOVER receives from employers of labor, great industrialists, a pledge to avoid discharge of employes as far as possible, and to avoid reduction in wages ABSOLUTELY.

THE President asks the labor unions, for the time being, until prosperity has been put firmly on its feet, to wage no labor fights for higher wages, except such as have already started.

It is a good program, labor and capital should adopt it, at least until we know just what, if anything, is the matter.

A LADY signs "One Who Has a Lot of Bank Stock and wants to Know Where She is Really At."

Where she is "at" depends on what stock she has, and who runs the bank.

ANOTHER person who may have been "in the market" writes: "All so-called prosperity is a joke. Justice is a thing of the past."

It is not quite so bad. Some see only their own misfortunes.

George Bleistein, of Buffalo, tells of a man, aged 40, leaving the office of a doctor who told him he had cancer, saying, "Just think of it, horrible, cancer at 40."

A passerby rebuked him, "What are you complaining of, friend? I had General Electric at 400."

A FEDERAL judge in Illinois decides that any man who sees liquor in a friend's house and does not report it to the authorities, is guilty of a felony.

The United States government will not utilize this decision in the prohibition campaign.

Literally applying the decision would put millions of Americans in jail. It would be hard to make room for them all.

THE United States shivered yesterday "from the Rockies to New Hampshire." Temperature in some places "16 below zero, snow storms and mild blizzards here and there, 14 dead in the United States." A good time to plan for California, Florida and the gulf coast.

IF CONGRESS adopts Secretary Mellon's recommendation, as it probably will, taxes levied on Americans will have been reduced nearly $2,000,000,000 since 1921.

Secretary Mellon believes that increased payments will more than make up for income tax reduction.

G. B. SHAW attributes the great war to men "who had the Oxford type of education."

If he were dictator of Great Britain, "not one man who has been from Eton to Oxford, or from Harrow to Cambridge, would be allowed to come within a mile of an English child."

INDIANS SEEK TO SCALP DUKES

By JESS CARVER.

The Irish of Duquesne and the Indians of Haskell, a swell combination, hold the center of the local football stage today, clashing at Forbes Field in an intersectional contest.

The invasion of the Indians here today marks the first time that an Indian eleven has played here since the last time one of Carlisle's famous Redmen teams curdled one's blood with its war whoops. This war party of braves fighting it out with the Dukes is a powerful outfit.

Only once this year has Haskell fallen by the wayside, the strong Loyola University (New Orleans branch) pulling out a 19-12 victory over the Injuns in a struggle in New Orleans. The eleven coached by Lone Star Deitz has defeated North Dakota, Creighton and Butler, among its major opponents, and Friends University, Baker and Missouri Teachers, among minor foes.

The Dukes put their well-nigh spotless record on the block today, at which the Injuns will take careful aim. Geneva, Westminster, Catholic University, Loyola of Baltimore, Slippery Rock and Edinboro have taken it on the chin from the Dukes. West Virginia held the locals to a 7-7 tie.

ATTACK VARIED

Haskell's attack is diversified, although Capt. Louis Weller (Little Rabbit), is the main spring of the backfield. This star, who weighs only 150 pounds, is fast and elusive enough to give trouble to the best laid defense. He ran

Ship Sending Mutiny SOS Not Located

VALETTA, Malta, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Four destroyers have searched unsuccessfully over a front of 75 miles seeking to intercept the steamer Baron Elcho whose wireless operator Thursday broadcast appeals for help, intimating a mutiny on board. At one time the British steamer Chaucer was said to have heard the Baron Elcho calling, but subsequently no reply was received to the Chaucer's responsive signals.

New Zealand Feels Earthquake Shock

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—A prolonged and fairly severe earthquake was felt in New Zealand early today with its center apparently near Motueka. The tremor was felt sharply here, severely at Westport and less severely at Nelson. Its duration was nearly a minute. Loud rumblings preceded the quake which shook houses. No damage was reported.

Board to Re-Align Voting Districts; Name Boundaries

A commission of nine to redistrict Allegheny County preparatory to use of voting machines was named by Judge John A. Evans, presiding in Quarter Sessions Court today.

The intention is to reduce the present number of election precincts, more than 1,400, that the cost of installation may be lessened.

The commission:

N. R. Criss, attorney and member of the Pittsburgh Board of Public Education; John T. Small, burgess of East McKeesport; George E. Meyers, realty dealer of Dormont; Howard W. Neely, attorney and Republican chairman of the Fourth Ward; David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman; Charles Flinn, brother of the late State Senator William Flinn and former registration commissioner; Mortimer B. Lesher, assistant county solicitor; Joseph G. Armstrong, Jr., son of Commissioner Armstrong and employe of Carnegie Steel Company; William H. Ziefel, chief clerk to County Commissioners.

Attorney Lesher announced that William H. Andrews had been selected as clerk to the commission and Jane R. Bailey, stenographer. The court will fix the compensation.

Judge Evans made the appointments on a petition of the County Commissioners setting forth that the present district boundaries would be unsuitable when vote machines, approved at the November election, were placed in use.

Vote machines were approved 190,283 to 40,607 in the county, the petition cited.

RELIEF NEARING TIDAL VICTIMS

Government officials have been spurred to extraordinary efforts to send relief to the sufferers by the stories of the disaster told by inhabitants of the southern coast arriving here

JUDGE FREED OF BLAME IN SHOOTING

Farmhand, Recovering in Hospital, 'Sorry' for Attack on County Jurist

"Guess I deserved it!"

This, and a contrite expression of regret, was Tag Olsen's explanation today of the shooting of which he was the victim on Judge Thomas C. Jones' Versailles Township farm last Saturday. Olsen, a farmhand, it is said, was shot by the 69-year-old county jurist, when, according to Jones' own words, "I thought my life was in danger."

News of the shooting did not reach county authorities until late yesterday. An investigation was begun this morning by County Detective James Reddington.

The judge, a quiet, gray-haired man of mild appearance, told of the shooting at his home this morning.

ORDERED JUDGE OFF

"I was crossing a field when Olsen, who has been in my employ for about three years, ordered me off the place.

"'Don't you know who I am?' I asked him.

"He replied that he didn't care who I was, and threatened to put me off bodily if I didn't leave. I succeeded in quieting him, however, and continued into the house, where my sister-in-law, Mrs. Blance Knox, and my grandson, Fauntly M. Jones, were visiting.

"In a few minutes Olsen came back and tried to break in—then after I talked with him he again went away. After a bit when things had quieted down, my sister-in-law, grandson and myself went outside.

WIELDS CLUB

"Olsen started for me with a club and as I backed away from him I tried to reason with him, but he kept coming. I drew my revolver and fired a shot into the air. This seemed to aggravate him further and I fired again when he was about 10 feet away, but the gun missed fire. I pulled the trigger again, and Olsen fell."

The judge told how he called help from neighboring farms and Olsen was removed to the McKeesport Hospital, where he is suffering from a flesh wound in the right side. His condition is not serious, according to hospital attaches.

Olsen, on his cot in the hospital this morning, said he wished he could tell Judge Jones he was "sorry."

"I'm ashamed of myself—guess I must have been terribly stewed," he declared.

Marie Merrifield Weds, Quits Stage

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Announcement was received here of the marriage in Yuma, Ariz., of Miss Marie Merrifield, of New York City, musical comedy prima donna, and Leo M. Meeker, Southern California banker. The bride is a great great granddaughter of President Andrew Jackson.

With her marriage, the prima donna has given up her stage career, the announcement said. Mrs. Meeker was prima donna in "No, No, Nanette," "Sonny," "Hit the Deck," "Katinka" and "Five O'Clock Girl."

Hoover's Quaker Meeting House Drops Collection

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(INS.)—The presiding elders of the Irving Street Quaker Meeting House, wherein President and Mrs. Hoover worship, believe so thoroughly in the freedom of religion that they no longer pass the collection plate on Sunday.

Decision to forego the customary offertory was reached by the board of trustees of the church following a survey that showed quite a majority of the weekly Sabbath "packed house" were sightseers, drawn by the prospect of catching a glimpse of the chief executive.

This situation, the deacons felt, savored too much of commercialism, and accordingly they adopted a resolution whereby all regular members of the church would be called upon to make a set contribution by mail.

Mr. Hoover had nothing to do with the decision, but concurred in it heartily. His own personal donation undoubtedly is the heaviest received.

CARREN TRACED TO BRADDOCK

The trail of Milton L. Carren, 43, who is alleged to have disappeared yesterday with $15,000 of the Westinghouse and Electric Manufacturing Company payroll, has been followed as far as Braddock, county detectives said today.

Carren entered a taxicab in East Pittsburgh about 8:45 o'clock yesterday morning, detectives learned. He was driven to a store in Braddock where he bought a black hat and a blue overcoat. He paid with a $50 bill, believed to be one of a package of 300 such bills that made up the sum taken.

He apparently had no change, for he asked the storekeeper to pay the $1.15 taxicab bill and this was deducted from the $50.

Carren, father of seven children, lived at 118 Shaw avenue, East Pittsburgh. He was a trusted employe.

PRINGLE GIRL'S 'JOBS' PROBED

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23.—(INS.)—Investigation of the activities of three Hollywood booking agents was being made here today by the district attorney's office following their efforts to involve Eunice Pringle, 17, in unauthorized engagements as an entertainer.

Summoned before Deputy District Attorney David Coleman last night to explain their actions "in behalf" of the girl whom Alexander Pantages was convicted of criminally attacking, the agents claimed to have been acting for "someone interested in the girl."

International News Service.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The science of medicine has done its utmost. The fate of Georges Clemenceau rested in unearthly hands today.

Bereft of the fighting spirit which had enabled him to bid death depart from his bed-chamber on more than one occasion before, the 88-year-old statesman lay waiting quietly for his end.

"He may live 24 hours or 24 minutes," said Dr. De Gennes, after examining M. Clemenceau today.

"With M. Clemenceau miracles are always possible. His kidneys are completely paralyzed and he is in a coma, so we can only hope."

Deputy Mandel, right-hand man of the former premier during the war, left the Clemenceau home shaking his head sadly.

"He is in a deep coma. I doubt if he will ever regain consciousness."

KNOWS END IS NEAR

In his last hours, Clemenceau's battle with death was eased by cessation of the wracking abdominal pains which beset him

THIEF FLEES WITH LOOT OF $2,000

Flight in Taxicab Foiled, Armed Man Eludes Police And Pedestrians in Chase

A Negro held up the Garfield Bank at 5100 Penn avenue at 9:30 a. m. today and escaped with from $2,000 to $3,000.

The Negro walked to the window of Teller A. J. Merhaut and asked change for $5. As Merhaut turned to supply the change, the Negro thrust a revolver through the cage and ordered, "Put 'em up."

Merhaut handed him a bundle of bills. The Negro rushed from the bank, brushing aside pedestrians. A few doors below the bank a taxicab he had hired was waiting.

TAXI DRIVER HALTS

Speirs heard the alarm, saw two women waving at him from across the street.

"Don't take him away," the women shouted.

Speirs pulled the choke, stalled his cab.

"Sorry," he told the Negro, "the car's stalled."

SHAKES OFF CLERK

Two hundred yards along Pacific avenue Harry Andrews, of 5027 Penn avenue, caught up to the fugitive. The Negro drew his revolver, threatened to shoot.

He sped on. In the 300 block of South Pacific, just four blocks removed from the bank, he ran in and out of yards, along an alley.

City detectives and deputy sheriffs had joined the chase, but the Negro succeeded in eluding them. They recovered on his trail a total of $250 he had dropped.

DRIVER'S STORY

Speirs, cab driver, told this story:

"There was a call for a cab from Millvale and Penn. I pulled up and the colored fellow was there. He told me to go to East Liberty.

"When we were a few doors below the bank, in front of the Veterans' Bureau office, he told me to stop there and wait.

"A couple of minutes later he came running back. He yelled, 'Get going, buddy.'

"I heard the bank alarm and I knew something was wrong. Then as I was starting two women across the street waved and yelled at me. I pulled the choke and that stalled the car. He jumped out and ran out Penn towards Pacific."

The holdup was similar to that of the Merchants Savings and Trust Company at 1410 Fifth avenue on September 26. A Negro who escaped in a taxicab with $5,400 was captured an hour later in the South Side.

Act of Kindness Costs Good Samaritan $8.25

Mike Gerwich, 35, of 3108 McClure avenue, has his doubts about the role of Good Samaritan today.

Last night Mike saw John Creedon, 28, of 1713 Eckert street, lying in Preble avenue. He hailed a taxicab, hurried him to St. John's Hospital, where, Creedon, who explained he was subjected to dizzy spells, was treated for lacerations.

The hospital bill was $2. Gerwich testified at the hearing today that hospital authorities held them for the bill. An argument followed. Patrolman Martin Morgan arrested both. They spent the night in jail.

Magistrate E. M. Hough fined Creedon $5 after Morgan testified that the patient had argued at the hospital. Gerwich was instructed to pay the hospital bill, the taxicab fare of $1.25.

He did. Not only that, he loaned Creedon $5, a stranger, $5 to pay the fine.

BUILDING INDUSTRY RALLIES BEHIND HOOVER BOOM PLAN

TWO BILLION TO BE SPENT ON ROADS

Railroads Plan Expenditure Of $1,000,000; Farm Chief To Meet President Monday

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The great building industry of the country, which takes in railroads, highways and utilities, as well as residential and ordinary construction, stood mobilized today behind a gigantic program that bids fair to make 1930 one of the greatest building years in recent history.

Rising to the emergency call sounded by President Hoover, almost every line of major industry has poured assurances into Washington this week that it contemplates greater expansion and construction next year than this. As viewed by government officials, striving desperately to discount the effect of weakened security prices, this means a continued high level of employment and steady and prosperous business for the steel and affiliated industries.

TWO BILLIONS FOR ROADS

Highway and street construction and improvement already outlined for next year reaches the enormous total of about $2,200,000,000, according to figures supplied President Hoover by the construction leaders of the country with whom he conferred yesterday.

The railroads contemplate capital expenditure of almost $1,000,000,000 for equipment and expansion.

The utilities interests, whose representatives come to the White House next Tuesday to discuss their program with Hoover, also are planning substantial expansion and development projects.

These favorable factors, coupled with the government's extension of its own building program and the expected normal increase in home-building, all point to a banner building year in 1930—and in President Hoover's opinion there could be no greater guaranty of the basic soundness of the country's business structure.

Building carries prosperity into many lines—it insures employment of labor on a high level, and it means good business for steel, lumber, cement and a considerable array of manufactured articles that go into the making of a home.

PARLEY SHOWS RESULTS

This much, if no more, has been accomplished by the series of conferences which President Hoover has been holding all week with the industrial kings of the country.

Scores of the "big men" in the industrial and financial life of the country have passed in and out of the White House this week, and without exception they have agreed to put their shoulders to the wheel to carry the country through the critical period caused by the series of shocks on the stock market. Without exception, too, they agreed that the basic business of the country is sound and that it only needs the sunshine of renewed confidence to reflect again the prosperity that it has experienced without surcease since 1924.

MONEY EASIER

Money has been made easier to facilitate the efforts to steady business. Rediscount rates have fallen generally throughout the country, and millions heretofore tied up in the stock market operations have been released to the channels of constructive endeavor.

President Hoover and his advisers are pretty well pleased with the picture as a whole.

There is no intention of resting upon what already has been accomplished. The ball having started rolling in the direction of stimulated business activity, Hoover and his advisers intend to keep it rolling.

At the President's direction, Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the board of the United States Chamber of Commerce, has sent out a general call for a big business conference here December 5, at which will be discussed ways and means of co-ordinating effort between various lines of industry, "to aid," the call said, "in business stabilization and the preservation of the recent high level of business activity."

"President Hoover will open this conference," said Barnes in his letter, which went to scores of big business executives throughout the country, "and from it will grow some form of business council for continuing action."

On Monday, President Hoover will confer with the leaders of the farm organizations at the White House.

At that time, it is probable Hoover will endeavor to enlist their support in the passage of the tariff bill early in the regular session of Congress which begins a week from Monday.

ment. He gave a graphic description of the disaster to International News Service.

"The houses and stores swept off the shore might have been towed back," he said, "but a terrific gale arose as soon as the tidal wave had subsided, and the buildings either were destroyed or carried out to sea. One house was towed back. The light in an upper room was still burning.

"The residents were taken absolutely by surprise. One family was swept to sea in their house while sitting at tea. The buiding was hurled back to shore by a second wave, and the father of the family, grasping a child in each arm and with his wife clinging to his back, leaped to safety from the doorway.

VILLAGES SWEPT CLEAN

"In the roar of the raging waters and the crashing of buildings, cries for help rang through the darkness and would-be rescuers knew not where to turn or how to help. As often as not, the rescuer went down and out to sea with the person he was aiding.

"The settlements were swept as clean as though the waterfront composed of prosperous fishing stores had never existed. Men are aghast as they view their life work swallowed by the sea.

"Not only are their premises, boats and gear gone, but also the provisions for tomorrow and for the entire winter. Even their fuel supply was snatched by the remorseless sea."

Bartlett estimated the damage at over $1,000,000. The rescue ship Meigle has arrived at Burin, and three others are en route. All carry extensive supplies.

With the resumption of wireless communication, disrupted by the wave, a check-up of the casualties was made possible. The total toll of dead stands at 26. There were virtually no injuries. The victims either were drowned in the one devastating surge of the sea, or escaped unscathed.

Moving Picture Nymphs May Be Barred in Mail

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Water sprites, wood nymphs, and lovely dryads are disturbing the peace-of-mind of the Postoffice Department.

Solicitor Donnell, who generally is called on to say what can and what cannot be sent through the mails, has been given a preview, and in some cases, an only-view of a group of films, designed for home moving pictures, presenting these mythical characters in all their beauty.

The solicitor, who makes a generous effort never to interfere with the dissemination of the artistic, is asking himself the famous question:

"They are beautiful—but—are they art?"

Third Girl Victim Of Shoe Thief In Holdup

This was the third case of the same nature reported to the police in the past two weeks.

throughout yesterday. He slept last night a peaceful sleep, awakening but rarely, and then only to mumble words of love for those about him, sorrow for the trouble he was causing, and brief instructions about his funeral.

Even better than his doctors, Clemenceau knows he is dying.

"Bury me in La Vendee," he said in one of his waking spells. "Bury me in the South; national funerals I abhor."

In his few spells of unconsciousness, Clemenceau's sole thoughts have been of his end. He was emphatic—or at least emphatic as a dying man can be—in his wish to be buried in La Vendee, near the spot where he had spent the latter part of his life working on his memoires, tending a tiny garden and distributing anonymous philanthropies among the neighboring countryfolk.

He has mapped out his funeral program, requesting that his body be buried upright, as that of his father was before him, and this mysterious fancy will be heeded.

Once he turned to Sister Theoneste, the sister of mercy who has been almost constantly at his bedside.

"Promise me faithfully, sister," the old man said, "when I am dead they must not place a cross above me. I have heard it argued about too much while I am alive. I do not want one over me when I die."

Then he called his friends and relatives.

"Bear witness," he said, "Clemenceau, the confirmed atheist, will be buried without benefit of clergy."

And those about him nodded assent. They will bury him in accordance with the wishes he has expressed throughout his life and in his dying hours.

Harvard Returns Fence As Yale Seeks Reprisal

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 23.—(INS.)—Yale's historic fence, which carries some of the most treasured traditions of Old Eli, was returned by Harvard to New Haven, Conn., by light auto truck today and finis was written to the so-called "perfect college crime."

And, in way of postlude a group of Yale students attempted to uproot a 15-foot elm tree from in front of the Harvard Lampoon Building, planted by John Key Wheelwright, founder of "Lampy" but police frustrated the act, regarded as an attempt at reprisal for the theft of the Yale barrier.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of the antique from a photographer's studio in New Haven last Saturday was cleared up in an unexpected fashion at a pre-football meeting of undergraduates of Yale and Harvard, in Lampoon Building.

"Boola, Boola, Bolla, Boola," sounded on a piccolo and into the room marched "Bob Lampoon," venerable jester, ahead of four Harvard students carrying the most-sought fence.

Said Albert G. Churchill, of Livermore, Cal., president of the Crimson funny paper:

"We heard with dismay of the theft of the fence. We searched and found it. We made arrangements to have it shipped back to its parents, where it will be spared the dangers always inherent in football games since a certain college—I mention no names—started the practice of removing immovable goalposts."

Then, by automobile, the fence was started on its journey home. At Worcester early this morning it was transferred to an auto truck, New Haven bound.

Brains and cash, it was reliably rumored at Harvard, were freely used in the so-called "perfect college crime." Eight undergraduates went to New Haven, got the lay of the land, and during the Yale-Princeton game, with a lookout posted and another man engaging a New Haven policeman in conversation, the fence was carefully removed from the New Haven studio. Brought to Cambridge by automobile, it was secreted in a house near Cambridge.

M'MANUS CASE JUROR ILL

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Illness of one of the jurors today threatened to cause complications—possibly a postponement—of the trial of George A. McManus for the murder of Arnold Rothstein, Broadway's "big shot" gambler and "man of mystery." The ailing juror is Eugene Riker, a traveling salesman, who has occupied position No. 2 in the jury box.

Judge Charles C. Nott, presiding at the trial, has assigned a physician to examine Riker. The doctor's report will be made when court reconvenes Monday, there being no session of court today.

If the stricken juror is pronounced unfit to remain on duty, either a mistrial will be declared or another juror chosen. It is regarded as most likely that the latter procedure will be followed.

Both District Attorney Joab H. Banton and Defense Attorney James D. C. Murray said they would agree to the selection of a new juror, but explained that Judge Nott was the final arbiter of the question.

Should a new juror be selected all the testimony thus far taken at the trial would have to be read to him in open court. He would have to be chosen from a new panel of talesmen. The procedure of issuing notices of the new panel would require two days and might make it impossible to continue taking of testimony until after Thanksgiving Day.

This new complication strengthened the belief held by many Broadwayites that McManus will escape punishment at the hands of the law in connection with the Rothstein case. Betting was 50 to 1 along the Gay White Way today that McManus will not go to the electric chair. They were betting that way years ago, however, during the trial of Police Lieut. Charles Becker, another famous New York case, but he "burned."

INDICT OFFICIAL IN TAX DODGE

CHICAGO, Nov. 23. — (AP.) — Federal investigation of income tax evasions in Chicago assumed a wider scope today with the indictment of Gene Oliver, member of Cook County's Board of Tax Assessors, charging him with evading income tax payments in 1926, 1927 and 1928.

United States Attorney Johnson estimated the amount due the government as approximately $42,000 for the three years, based on a net income of $272,616.88.

Oliver's salary as tax assessor is $9,000 a year. The exact nature of the receipts set out by the government is not disclosed in the 1926 and 1928 counts. In the 1927 count, however, the government expanded the bare charges to the extent of saying that the income was gained from "legal services rendered," "profits from race bets" and "large deposits of money."

Oliver's bonds were placed at $25,000.

Small Contributions Help to Boost Fund to $795,764; Laborers Insist on Giving Contributions from many persons in humble circumstances yesterday added more than $70,000 to the Welfare Fund and swelled the total to date to $795,764.78.

Although all the teams turned in their usual quota of donations for the support of 31 Pittsburgh and Allegheny County philanthropies there was an increasing number of small subscriptions. This indicates that all the people are united behind the Welfare Fund, it was stated, and upon the wage workers and others who give cheerfully but can afford only a little—depends the final success of the campaign for $1,168,055.

100 PER CENT FIRMS

The big throng at the luncheon in Pirate Hall, William Penn Hotel, found a thrill in the report of F. J. Chesterman, chairman of the employe team, when he read the list of firms whose employes subscribed 100 per cent. J. T. Miller, captain of special team No. 6, reported that the employes of the Pennsylvania Water Company contributed 100 per cent on the basis of one day's pay.

"The labor gang was not asked to contribute," said Chairman Miller, "because they are engaged in outdoor work and soon are liable to be laid off when bad weather comes. But the 100 men in the labor gang would not allow themselves to be overlooked and every mother's son of them subscribed a cash sum. All are Italians and none of our contributors were more generous."

Other concerns that turned in 100 per cent subscriptions from the employes were Dixon Motor Company, H. J. Heinz, Company, Edwin Bell Lumber Company, William B. Scaife & Sons, and the general office force of the Harbison-Walker Company. S. Strunz & Sons, Inc., offered to duplicate every subscription given by its employes. H. E. Phifer, captain of the team at the Joseph Horne Company, reported $1,151 for the day. Harry G. Burke, captain of the Methodist Book Concern, said that his office has subscribed 11 per cent over its quota.

CANVASS SUCCEEDS

Encouraging returns were received from the captains engaged in the house-to-house canvass. In those districts that have been well organized it was reported that the people are subscribing liberally and the question of the success of the canvass depends upon the ability of the workers to call upon all their prospects.

"In some districts the people are not waiting for our workers," said Mrs. John M. Phillips, chairman of the allied territory division, "and donations have been sent in voluntarily."

The next meeting for the reading of reports will be held at luncheon in Pirate Hall, William Penn Hotel, Monday, and the canvass will close with a dinner in the same place Wednesday at 6:15 p. m.

CHURCH CLOSES 'CURE SHRINE,' PENDING INVESTIGATION

LAST MINUTE STAMPEDE BEGUN

International News Service.

MALDEN, MASS., Nov. 23.—Stirred by Cardinal O'Connell's edict closing the gates of Holy Cross Cemetery to pilgrims beginning Monday, immense throngs today began a last-minute rush to the grave of the Rev. Patrick Power.

Cemetery officials estimated that more than 10,000 men, women and children had formed long lines today. It was one of the biggest early morning crowds since the reported miraculous cures at the grave of the priest first became widespread.

RUSH CONTINUES

The last rush to the grave was made despite the request of the cardinal that pilgrims refrain from visiting the tomb to avoid the inconvenience of great crowds over the week end.

Closing of the cemetery gates to all persons, except for funerals, was made known through the cardinal's secretary, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis Burke.

The Cardinal's order will be in effect until the church has made a thorough investigation into the reported miraculous cures attributed to the 60-year-old grave. This will require quite a while, for before the Catholic Church recognizes a shrine as miracle working, an exhaustive study must be made and three major cures established as fact.

GATES BARRED

Iron workers have braced the gates of the cemetery so that they might be securely locked tomorrow night. Today, rope fences were used by authorities in keeping the people in orderly check. Tomorrow, when last Sunday's record crowd of near 250,000 will likely be shattered, special detachments of policemen will be on hand to quell any disturbances.

Cold weather yesterday reduced the crowds, but cripples were passing the grave all day. As has been the case since the first day, many cures and near-cures were reported.

PLANS TO SPEED TRAFFIC URGED

Proposals which Chamber of Commerce officials believe will help to eliminate traffic congestion in the downtown district have been offered for consideration by the city and suburban traffic committee of the organization. Frank L. Duggan is chairman of the committee.

It is proposed that coal deliveries and ash and garbage removals be performed outside of business hours, that parades be prohibited through downtown except on Sundays and holidays, that definite traffic lanes be marked on all wide streets and that loading platforms for street car passengers be installed wherever possible.

It is also proposed that parking regulations be strictly enforced and fines collected for violations. The report, approved by the Chamber, will be forwarded to the Mayor, city councilmen and members of the Better Traffic Committee and the City Planning Commission. The district reported upon affects the streets bounded by the two rivers, Eleventh street and Grant street.

It is the intention of the company, he said, to improve land purchased here. Fisher was toastmaster at the annual banquet of the Board of Trade.

WILKINS HUNTS LANDING FIELD

By Capt. SIR HUBERT WILKINS, Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition.

DECEPTION ISLAND, Antarctica, Nov. 23.—(Via S. S. Melville and KUP, San Francisco Wireless Station.)—With our planes practically ready for flight we had time to examine the landing fields on the bay ice and on shore.

Conditions for landing planes at both places could not be worse. The land field is partly covered with snow, yet not enough for us to use skiis. The surface is impossible for ordinary wheels.

With special wheels, however, provided with large-size tires, 15 inches wide, we feel sure that we can safely test the planes from the land.

The bay ice is worse even than last year and is too treacherous for us to use at all. Because of this we must soon look for a more southerly base. The steamer William Scoresby will be of great assistance in this search.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—Radio conditions in the Antarctic region are slowly becoming better, it has been learned following a radio report received from Victor Olsen, chief radio operator for the Wilkins-Hearst expedition.

On the trip from Montevideo to Deception Island aboard the S. S. Melville, he announced the Examiner's radio station signals were very weak, and from time to time fading so badly that solid copy of press was impossible.

"The party has succeeded in establishing a land radio station at Deception," Olsen said, "and that will improve communication between San Francisco and the island. Two tall masts have been erected on one side of the camp and the antenna has been strung between them. The station proper is located a short distance from Capt. Wilkins' quarters."

Olsen also stated that he was in direct communication with the whaler Hektoria, which accompanied the expedition last year to Deception Island. The Hektoria's position was given as some 500 miles west of Deception.

The Examiner station KUP, in direct daily communication with Olsen, has been asked to notify Capt. Wilkins at once when Ben Eielson, who has been reported lost in the Arctic region, is found.

DOCKET OMITS RUM PLOTS

None of the Pittsburgh rum conspiracy cases resulting from the Federal grand jury investigation 18 months ago are listed for trial during the November term of court which begins Monday. No date for the conspiracy trials has yet been announced and it is likely that a special term of court may be held.

There is some talk at the government offices of holding a special term of court in February for the trying of the Somerset county rum conspiracies and it is possible that the Pittsburgh cases may be brought up at that time.

In addition to several important groups of city defendants to go on trial in the conspiracy cases, the McKeesport conspiracy case is still to be brought to trial. However, this case to begin December 2. The Greene County rum plot case, although not listed, probably will be brought up for trial in December also.

G. O. P. CHIEFS SEEK SENATE HARMONY

Peace Chances Appear Slim As Senators Scatter; Break in House Possible

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Its honeymoon over, the Seventy-first Congress scattered far and wide today for a week's vacation before resuming its political wars at the regular session, starting Monday, December 2.

The Senate, exhausted by months of partisan strife over the farm bill and tariff, began organizing hunting and golfing parties as a relaxation. The House, having enjoyed a vacation during most of the summer and all of the fall, merely continued to do nothing.

MAY PUSH VARE CASE

The administration's efforts were directed toward uniting the "old guard" and "young Turk" Republicans in the Senate and holding the hundred-vote Republican majority intact in the House. Cladius H. Huston, Republican national chairman, appeared to be in charge of this strategical maneuver.

The coalition leaders meanwhile looked forward to the election case of Senator-elect William S. Vare (Rep.), of Pennsylvania. Under an agreement, the case will come up for Senate action on December 3, but administration leaders may seek its postponement into the new year. There were signs the Democratic-Insurgent coalition would oppose this delay and unite in forcing an immediate decision in the Vare case—a decision that can only result in his exclusion.

It was a certainty, too, that the coalition would present the same united and dominating front in the tariff war at the regular session.

HOUSE MAY SPLIT

Rumors of the formation of a similar coalition in the House were heard in connection with the tariff. It was said Representative John N. Garner, of Texas, Democratic floor leader, had won the assent of 54 Republican representatives to unite in defending the Senate bill against the House measure. This would give Garner control of a majority of the House—if true.

Talk of removing present Republican leaders in the Senate has died.

JUDGE STUDIES REDS' APPEAL

Judge Samuel J. McKim, of County Court, yesterday heard argument in the case of three members of the Young Communist League, arrested and fined $10 by Magistrate Edward M. Hough for holding a meeting without a permit and who appealed from Hough's decision. Judge McKim will render a decision later on the appeal. All are out on bail.

The three arrested included Freda Truhart, William Albertson and Samuel Herman. The arrest occurred July 10 and the fines were imposed on July 22.

Judge Thomas P. Jones yesterday handed down a decision in a similar case, sustaining the action of Magistrate Hough in fining Fred Kerns, Fannie Toohey, Samuel Herman, Michael Harrison and Pat Crouch $100 each. They had been granted a permit but it was revoked before the meeting was held. Judge Jones held that they had violated the provisions of a city ordinance requiring a permit for holding public gatherings.

Four Die as Huge Wave Engulfs Steamer

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Nov. 23.—(AP.)—The Dutch steamer Stad Vladingef, which reached Sydney today, reported that a hugh wave had swept overboard and drowned her boatswain and three seamen, outside the Atlantic entrance to the Straight of Belle Isle Sunday afternoon.

Capt. Wyfeemann, who was in command of the ship, said that it had met a gale which rapidly grew to hurricane force, making it necessary to heave to. The captain said that as he and the chief officer stood on the bridge suddenly a wave of great size swept down on the ship, and before either of them could utter a word, it engulfed the craft from stem to stern.

TOLL IN STORE BLAST NOW 6

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—The death list in the explosion under a five and ten-cent store Thursday rose to six with the death of Mrs. Florence Darlington, 50, who succumbed to internal injuries.

Five others died within a few hours after the explosion and several other victims are believed by physicians to be near death.

While seven investigations into the disaster were in progress, Maj Donald A. Davison, assistant engineer commissioner, reported a low pressure hot water boiler was the cause, and not an oil furnace as was at first stated by police officials.

Detectives today were searching for a well-dressed young woman who late yesterday entered the office of Thomas E. Perry, Jr., a broker, of 5034 Jenkins building, and fled with $100 which she took from the safe.

Miss Florence Gaussa, a clerk, told police that while in an adjoining office, she heard noise in the front room. Investigating, she saw the woman hurriedly leaving the office. She discovered five $20 bills were missing from the money drawer of the safe. A large sum of money, lying underneath checks in the same drawer, was not touched.

STATE SEEKS PAYMENT IN FORGERIES

Banks or Firms That Cashed Checks in $129,000 Fraud Held Liable by Waters

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 23.—Auditor General Charles Waters has moved to protect the state for the full amount of the more than $129,000 fraud which has been uncovered in the State Department of Agriculture.

Waters turned over to the state treasury more than 300 checks which were cashed with forged indorsements and asked that collection be made at once from the state's active depositories.

The move of Auditor General Waters means that firms or banks which cashed the forged checks will be compelled to make good the full amount of all of them. The checks are sent through the state depositories with the legend 'all prior indorsements guaranteed.' Firms and banks which "guaranteed" the fake signatures now will be compelled to make them good.

TWO SUSPECTS HELD

The two men who are charged with the fraud—Guy H. Thomas, a former employe of the Bureau of Animal Industry, and Charles C. Stark—are in jail here in default of $20,000 bail each. The fraud was made possible by the substitution of fake vouchers among bona-fide ones which covered payments for cattle slaughtered in the war against bovine tuberculosis.

The active depositories in which the payments were made are said to be the Mellon National Bank, Pittsburgh; Diamond National Bank, Pittsburgh; Colonial Trust Company, Pittsburgh; Philadelphia National, Corn Exchange, of Philadelphia; The Penn National, Philadelphia; the Harrisburg Trust Company, Harrisburg; The Commonwealth Trust Company, Harrisburg, and the Quaker City of Philadelphia. The latter was an active depository of state moneys at the time of the fraud.

SHIP ON ROCKS, CREW SAVED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—(INS.)—Having become confused by fog and smoke from forest fires the wooden freight steamship Daisy Putnam is lying on the rocks of the Northern California coast today.

The ship has no wireless and news of the wreck was telephoned to Freeman & Co., owners, from the home of a rancher into which the 21 members of the crew had staggered after swimming ashore.

No lives were lost, the message stated, although the vessel is believed to be a total wreck. The location was given as near Punta Gorda, between Fort Bragg and Eureka. The ship left San Francisco Thursday morning in ballast for Portland.

Capt. M. C. Ytting and crew at last reports were walking the beach toward a coast guard station.

Agents Get Big Rum Haul in South Fork

SOUTH FORK, Pa., Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Federal prohibition agents from Pittsburgh seized 1,000 100-pound bags of corn sugar, a quantity of granulated sugar, 200 bushels of rye and 27 barrels of whisky in an old storehouse here. The whisky was hidden under the sugar. Agents were searching for Joseph Brabil, named in a warrant as lessee of the building.

Suspicion was aroused, federal operatives said, when reports reaching them said there appeared to be activity about the storehouse, which had been vacant for years.

Cold and Hungry, Young Elopers Ask Police Aid

Cold weather and hunger early today put to an end the wedding plans of Edward Sharpe, 19, and Jacqueline Northbridge, 16, of Woodhaven, N. Y., who with two boy friends who would have witnessed the wedding, appealed for shelter at Central Police Station.

Police notified their parents, who were expected in Pittsburgh late today to take the elopers back home.

With them were Alfred Lerner, 18, and John Kunpel, 19, both of Ozone Park, New York.

Sharpe told police they left home several days ago in an automobile belonging to his father, and went to Chester, Pa., where a marriage license was refused. From that city they drove to Ligonier, where they slept in the automobile Thursday night. They arrived in Pittsburgh last night, and after wandering about the downtown district several hours could endure the cold and hunger no longer and appealed to police.

First American Theatrical Season Opens in Paris

PARIS, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—"The Road to Rome," a play with a New York cast, opened last night at the Theater Femina in the Champs Elysees, inaugurating the first American theatrical season in Paris. A large Franco-American audience welcomed a typically American production. McKay Morris played Hannibal and Jessie Ralph Fabia.

It was the gala opening of the Paris-American players, directed by Carol M. Sax, known in America for productions with Morris Gest, Margaret Anglin, George Tyler, and the Shuberts, and founder of Baltimore's vagabond players.

Backed by a group of wealthy Americans, the players will give six recent American successes, bringing some of the mort prominent members of the original casts to Paris for each play. The heavy subscription list and the recent popularity of the American drama here encouraged the producer's plan of establishing a permanent American theater in Paris to present Broadway hits.

Each of the six plays is to run two weeks. After "The Road to Rome," George Kelly's "The Torchbearers," Kenneth Nicholson's "The Barker," Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms," Gilda Varesi's "Enter Madame," and A. E. Thomas' "Just Suppose" will be given.

The enterprise has received the unofficial encouragement of the Ministry of Fine Arts.

SERMONETTE

"Lecture on Christian Science"

By BLISS KNAPP, C. S. B., Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Christian Scientists and the medical men can unite in the fact that disease in its cause is mental. It is a great discovery to learn that disease is mental, for we know that we can guide and direct our own thinking into paths of peace and health. But when we come to the consideration of a mental remedy for disease, then the physicians and the Christian Scientists part company. The physicians may seek the remedy in matter or in hypnotic suggestion, which is the product of the carnal mind; whereas the Christian Scientist looks for the remedy in Spirit or divine Mind. These two types, the carnal mind on the one hand and divine Mind on the other, "are contrary the one to the other;" for, as Paul has said, "to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

Mrs. Eddy was on her way to a temperance meeting when she slipped and fell on the ice, and sustained an injury, which her physician declared must result fatally. On the third day following the accident, Mrs. Eddy turned to her Bible and began to read from the Gospel of Matthew how Jesus healed the palsied man. Doubtless Mrs. Eddy had read that account many times, but this time she was under the stress of circumstances. Her physician, from a material point of view, declared that she must die; she herself knew that nothing material could save her. So she turned absolutely to God, and from that spiritual point of view, she read how Jesus healed the palsied man, and as she read she began to comprehend how the healing was done. The result was that she herself was instantly healed.

HEALING EFFECT OF THE TEXTBOOK

In Mrs. Eddy's healing was the proof of God's presence and power. Then she resumed her study of the Bible, and began to write out her observations from the spiritual point of view, as a scribe under orders. Those writings formed the basis of her book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." Then Mrs. Eddy discovered that the reading of her book heals the sick, because it lifts one in thought to that spiritual point of view from which he can begin to see and comprehend that which is absolutely true in the sight of God. The Bible declares that the seed of truth is in itself. It is the living, palpitating, vitalizing power and presence of the divine nature which, as one understands it, he can always express. As this book, Science and Health, leads the individual to see and understand that which is true in the sight of God, the expression of that understanding is manifest in healing, purification, and regeneration.

MRS. EDDY PROVED THE HEALING POWER TEACHABLE

In her book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which was first published in 1875, Mrs. Eddy has proved that she not only understood this Science of divine healing herself, but that she could express it in language which enabled others to understand and repeat the healing.

News About Present and Coming Shows and Chat From Studios

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

WE have discovered what keeps mayors busy. With the co-operation of Alfred M. Lee, of the Better Traffic Committee, we have snitched this letter which a young pupil aimed at Mayor Kline.

Honorable Sir:—"I suppose you have heard a little about the traffic essay in the public and parochial schools. I am writing to you for this purpose, wondering if you would please send me a little information about the essay. I will appreciate it very much if you will do so."

Police Lieut. Jack Lavery telling the story of a heel:

"This happened at the 'Eagle's Nest' in the Strip a long time ago. They were playing cards. One customer laid down aces and sevens, the winner had aces and eights.

"A fight started. The loser made quite an impression on the winner with an ax and beat it. But one of his heels caught on the doorstep.

"We got there a few minutes after the fight. I grabbed the heel and bee-lined for the Union Station. And I got there just as a one-heeled guy was swinging onto a train. He was our man and we took him. He went up the river."

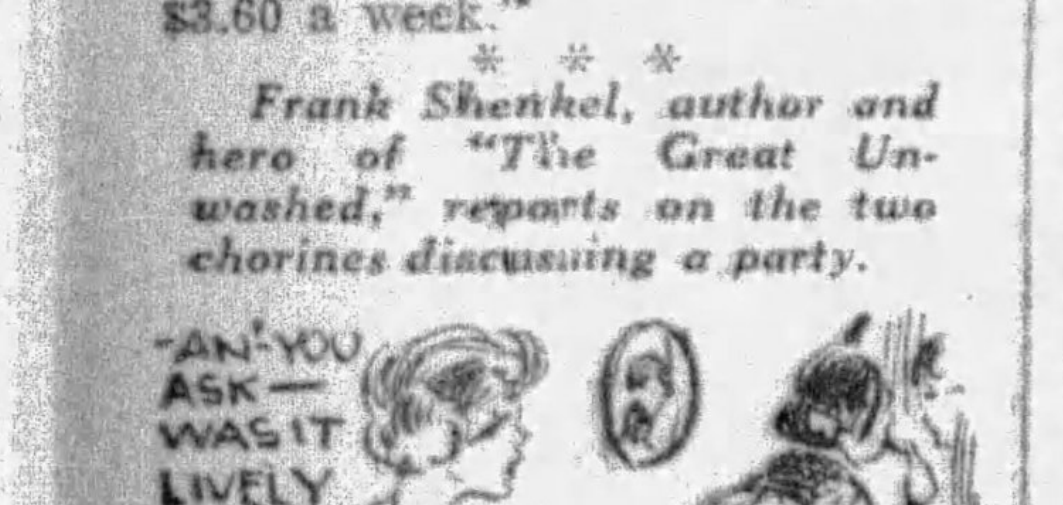
LAVERY, incidentally, has been on the force 19 years and is entitled to his pension in another year. He and Tommy (Sherlock) Morgan, Frank Morgan's big boy, were copy boys on the old Pittsburgh News Agency (succeeded by the Tri-State News Bureau) in the days when Joe Mackrell, Maj. W. H. Davis, Walter Christy and Gib March and Jim McAfee were the town's star reporters.

"We got $3.60 a week," the veteran Mr. Morgan recalls,



ALL WE GOT WAS $3.60 A WEEK !
YEH?—BUT Y'DIDN'T PAY 4.40 TO SEE A SHOW !

"but, of course, in those days $3.60 a week was—well, it was $3.60 a week."

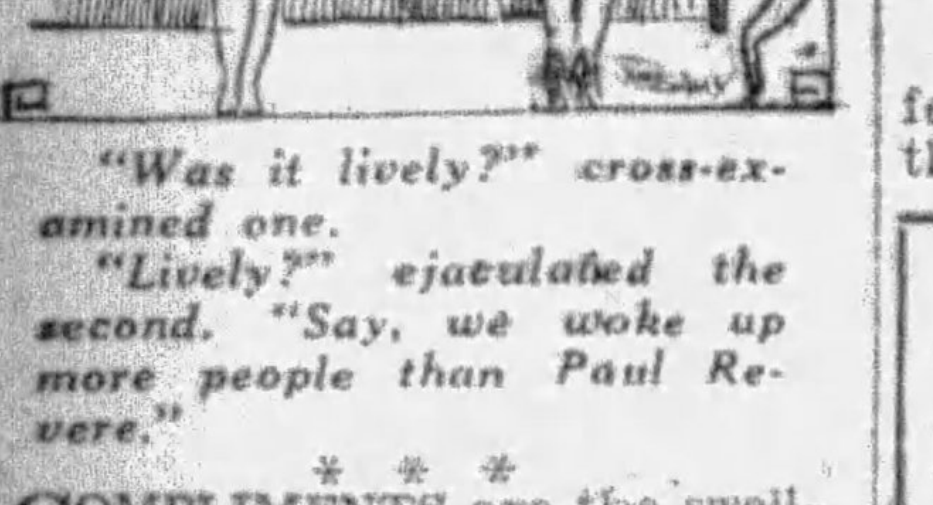
Frank Shenkel, author and hero of "The Great Unwashed," reports on the two chorines discussing a party.



-AN' YOU ASK—WAS IT LIVELY !

"Was it lively?" cross-examined one.

"Lively?" ejaculated the second. "Say, we woke up more people than Paul Revere."

COMPLIMENTS are the swellest things in all the world. They make a fellow feel like booming out, "Boys, the ice cream sodas with whipped cream are on me."

So it is with becoming modesty that we pass on the following letter:

"Sir: Can you tell me where i can continue to follow the writings of Havey J. Boyle.

N. G."

Says Wife Cruel, Sues for Divorce

Park Lee Scheller, of the Penn Lincoln Hotel, Wilkinsburg, asked a divorce from Edith Scheller, 47 Castle Shannon road, Mt. Lebanon, in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court, alleging cruelty and indignities. They were married August 21, 1915.

M'CORMACK SINGING IN FILM TO TUNE OF QUARTER OF MILLION DOLLARS

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright 1929, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 23.

WITH Thanksgiving next Thursday and Christmas within bill collectors' distance, the celluloid lots are approaching customary holiday gaiety.

Fox have let out some 650 men. Universal about equals that number. The Warner studio idles until the first of the year, which means hundreds are jobless.

John McCormack

John McCormack took out official movie citizenship papers when he purchased a Cadillac car for himself and one for his family's use. He drives to and from the Fox Westwood plant, where his initial vocalloid is being produced. As they drive on the left hand side of the street in Ireland, McCormack forgets himself ever so often in a right hand town. Thus far, he has had to sing himself out of two tickets.

John Gets $10 For First Role

THIS same McCormack, years ago, as a youth departed Ireland for London with a letter of introduction to a stage producer. The S. P. offered the youthful tenor a ten dollar a week job in the chorus!

In his "Who's Who," (Hutchins & Co. (London) publisher) Hannen Swaffer, W. K. English critic, says of McCormack:

"McCormack had a hard time of it in Bloomsbury. When he went to see 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' in which he had lost the part of Squire Thronhill because of his Irish accent, he had no money with which to buy a program! Yet, before America discovered him, he became one of the worst actors ever known, even on the Covent Garden stage, where he sang leading parts.

"He used to stand with his back to the audience and look just a funny, fat man. Then America took his Irish smile to her heart, and during the war McCormack made speeches against England in the United States and became an American as a protest against his British citizenship.

"My article on McCormack stopped his first concert in 1920—he had already canceled his Australian tour because the audience sang 'God Save the King'—but before his return, four years later, we had all relented. Ever since, McCormack has been a London idol, paid as much as 650 pounds (approximately $3,250) for a few songs at the Mayfair Hotel, and becoming, with the exception of Chaliapin, Paderewski, and Kriesler, the only artist who can fill the Albert Hall. In America he has drawn over 2,000 pounds (about $10,000) in a night."

Verily, 'tis a far cry from an offer of a $10-a-week chorus job to the making of a talky film that is said will net John McCormick a quarter of a million dollars.

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 23.

That was the first time Henry Ford had ever attended one of these big financial pow wows; he didn't know that all you was supposed to do was pass a resolution and then adjourn. He thought you had to do something definite, so he raised everybody's salary.

The Senate got sore when Mr. Hoover declared a national day of Thanksgiving to celebrate their closing. Now I kinder string with the Senate on this. They didn't pass the tariff bill for the thing wasn't any good.

Never blame a legislative body for not doing something, when they do nothing. That don't hurt anybody. It's when they do something is when they become dangerous.

Yours, WILL.

Mr. Gilbert, Ina Arouse Gossip

JACK GILBERT and Ina Claire put over a shrewd one when they glibly called the press to their Hillside home and informed them that carpenters were separating them for a short while. Very shrewd, that. And yet, the colony leaps at the chance to take sides as to whether this is the beginning of the end or merely a matrimonial hyphen. At that, six months is a long time to be married—in Hollywood. . .

John Gilbert.

SCREENALTIES: Al Cohn, scenaruo chief of First National, has been selected to fill the office of honorary vice president of the Authors' League of America. That, very definitely, makes Al a big shot and Mr. Cohn to us all. . . Cedric Gibbons, M. G. M. art director, leaped to separate Aileen Pringle's canine from another snarler and subsequently had his right hand severely bitten. . . H. N. Swanson, visiting ed of College Humor, socking ye tennis ball together with Mary Duncan, Carmelita Geraghty and Willis Goldbeck. . . . Pauline Garon has postponed her voodvl appearance for the time being, Polly remains in Hollywood. . . . James Hall purchased a lil' hotel on Wiltshire blvd., and his dad has been running it for him. Jimmy's parents and two sisters are now living in Flickburg. . . . And—that's all.

Late Sunday Show In Sheridan Square

There will be a special midnight show in the R-K-O Sheridan Square Sunday night when Florenz Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita" will be presented. The show will begin promptly at 12.05 a. m. Bebe Daniels and John Boles have the leading roles in "Rio Rita," and the supporting cast includes Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, both seen in the stage production of the same play, Dorothy Lee and hundreds of others.

NEW ENGLAND, PARIS CLASH IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The ancestral traditions of Puritan New England clash with the gay scheme of life in that big town, Paree, in the talk screen version of the stage success, "Paris," which opened yesterday in the Stanley. The clash takes place to the tune of a comic symphony led by that vivacious and dark abundance of Parisian femininity, Irene Bordoni, who also starred in the stage production.

In the film an artistocratic Massachusetts mother, with Puritan complex, sends her son to Paris to study architecture. Which he does, evidently, from the front row in a theater, for he falls in love with a French actress. Horrified and very seasick the mother arrives in Paris and there follows her very heroic and very amusing efforts to prevent the match.

SYMBOLIC STATUETTES

As for which wins this Massachusetts vs. Paris bout—who can say? The two sculptural statuettes introduced, and which may be taken as sympols of the clash, pass out completely long before the fadeout. One, very arty and clothless, is replaced by a pilgrim father, robust and fully garbed when news comes that mother is to arrive. But his reign also is brief. In a fit of Bordoni hysterics—as part of her role as the actress, of course—he is smashed against the floor. Then, too, in the finish, mother gets back her boy and the actress wins the man she really loved all the time. All of which sounds very complicated and mixed up. But remember, it is as funny and hilarious as it is complicated.

The picture has some elaborate scenic effects, which depict, in color, a big show in action. Here La Bordoni displays her vocal talents and the sound machine treats them kindly.

Some excitement and thrill is injected by a theater fire scene. Chorus girls rush into the streets scantily clad. And La Bordoni has a line about one having nothing more on than cake of soap. That's an exaggeration.

EMPHASIS ON "PILL"

Jack Buchanan, as leading man, sings some songs and offers some steps in addition to his romantic emoting. He plays an actor, the man who gets the heroine-actress in the end. Louise Closser Hale handles the mother part in a clever style. Zasu Pitts gets by with some major comics in the minor role of maid "Emphasis should be on the 'pill,'" she says, referring to the pilgrim father statuette. Jason Robards is fair as the Massachusetts boy who is reclaimed by family tradition—and by his mother.

The stage show is titled "Pow Pow" and displays the boys of the band in cowboy hats and the Rocket girls in Indian feathers. The youthful and popular M. C.—Dick Powell—got quite a lot of applause yesterday with his musical megaphoning of "Singing in the Rain." He went into two or three encores—each time with a different number. A knockout of a sort is the dance team, Barto and Mann, two fellows who are keen at the stepping and at trick somersaulting. They manage some comedy antics and, it may be added, a few gestures that aren't so nice. A fellow and girl who toot horns and play accordions and another fellow who makes music out of kitchen ware are in the revue.

The spotlight finally locates Bernie Armstrong and he gives an organlogue, "Hokum." And it is just that.

Songster Booked For Silver Slipper

Don Santros, heralded as "the crooning songster," Monday will open an indefinite engagement at Billy King's Silver Slipper, the new night club in the Kenyon Theater building. In addition to Santros, Manager King will present Nat Rodgers, master of ceremonies; Aleene Denniston, blues singer, and Nora Lewis, featured dancers. George Weber and his orchestra will play.

OPERA ROLE

Dorothy Githens will appear with the Wrench Italian Opera Company in the presentation of "La Boheme" in Syria Mosque tonight.

JACK PEARL IN NEW REVUE

Monday night in the Alvin "Pleasure Bound," new Shubert revue, will open a one-week engagement in Pittsburgh. Jack Pearl, Phil Baker, Aileen Stanley and Shaw and Lee appear in the cast.

"R. U. R.," a Theater Guild production, will open an engagement in the Nixon Monday. The play is described as a melodrama of the Machine Age.

"The Shannons of Broadway," with Harland Tucker and Mabel Kroman in the leading roles, will be next week's George Sharp presentation in the Pitt.

George Jessel, stage star, has the lead role in "Love, Live and Laugh," a talk film, which begins an engagement in the Harris today. Jessel sings several songs in the picture.

The voice of the first leading man of the New York Metropolitan Opera Company is heard in Radio Pictures' "Rio Rita," opening today in the Sheridan Square. It belongs to Nick de Ruiz, a lyric tenor. Bebe Daniels and John Boles head the cast.

"Little Johnny Jones," all-talking screen version of George M. Cohan's stage play, featuring Eddie Buzzell, comes today to the Enright. On the stage Jay Mills presents "Thanksgiving Jubilee."

When Greta Garbo went on location to make tennis scenes for "The Kiss," her new starring vehicle, which comes to the Penn Monday, all she had to do was to step out of her backyard. The tennis scenes were filmed at the Beverly Hills Hotel, just behind Miss Garbo's residence. Conrad Nagel plays opposite Miss Garbo.

Carnival to Open At Castle Shannon

The community carnival for the benefit of the Castle Shannon volunteer fire department will open tonight in the municipal building and will continue every night next week. Fire Chief Leo P. Schenot is in charge. Equipment for the department will be purchased with the proceeds.

George Arliss is supported by Joan Bennett, David Torrence, Henry Carville and many others in "Disraeli," current film in the Grand.

One man, at least, in Hollywood has never made a personal stage appearance. He is Harold Lloyd, whose initial all-talking picture, "Welcome Danger," enters a second week in the Aldine Monday.

The Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Should honesty be rewarded with money or merely thanks?

C. S. ROONEY, Boyle street, Northside, florist: "I think it depends largely on the person. If it's a poor person, I believe money would mean more than thanks. If the person has plenty of money I think sincere thanks is sufficient. I respect a poor man who accepts the money as a reward just as much as the rich man who refuses it."

C. S. Rooney.

LOUISE CAMINO, Westborn street, Northside, stenographer: "Sometimes a person's 'thank you' is just as good as money. If he returned something of real value, he should be rewarded. I wouldn't offer money unless he returned something of real value, however. Different people think diversely. It all depends on the circumstances in the case, the generosity of the giver and the position of the person who has done the honest deed."

Louise Camino.

C. M. PETERS, Kelly street, Wilkinsburg, maintenance man: "It all depends on the person. Those who are greedy appreciate money more than thanks, but the man who is honest for honesty's sake is satisfied with thanks alone. In this day and age I would offer money, for everyone seems to think that the 'almighty dollar' is a great thing. The only way to reward half of the people is by money. I would respect a man much more for refusing."

C. M. Peters.

ALICE POLLOCK, Oneida street, Duquesne Heights, telephone operator: "I think 'thanks' is plenty. I think it is an individual's duty to be honest and I don't think he should expect a cash reward. I'd offer a reward if someone returned something I valued highly, of course, but I wouldn't expect a remuneration if I had a chance to help someone out by my honesty. I don't think it's quite ethical."

Miss M. Pollock.

WILLIAM J. MURPHY, Hamilton avenue, investigator: "By money! I think it's o. k. to make one's appreciation apparent by rewarding honesty with money. If I lost anything valuable and it was found I would reward the honest man or woman who found it. Of course, everyone has a different opinion and it is up to the individual to do as he sees fit in the matter. Most people would appreciate money although there are sometimes cases when 'thanks' is plenty sufficient."

W. J. Murphy.

HENRY J. SCHMIDT, Carson street, publicity man: "An honest person ought to be rewarded with money. The ordinary honest man would refuse a reward although it would be perfectly alright to take it. He wouldn't be doing anything wrong. Honesty should not require a reward as an individual would be only practicing the Golden Rule by returning something he had found. He would want someone else to act accordingly to him if he lost anything of value."

H. J. Schmidt.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk See Opera, 'Carmen'

IN spite of the multiplicity of interests making hectic the days of society folks, you'll always find the "400" represented at any dramatic, artistic or musical event here at home.

Last night at "Carmen," in the Syria Mosque, I saw some of the busiest and most popular members of the younger married set. For example, smoking in the foyer between acts, were Mrs. Donald Scott Rodgers and Mrs. J. Porter Gillespie, who are ever so busy planning for the Cinderella ball on December 9 in the University Club, and goodness knows how many other benefits.

Eggshell satin in the princess mode, with fullness given to the long skirt by a pleated godet was worn by Mrs. Rodgers. Very striking was very tall, slender Mrs. J. Porter Gillespie in a gown of deep wine-red crepe sweeping to the floor. The decolletage in the back was cut very low, and the gown was made still more distinctive by a petal skirt.

Among the members of the younger set there last night was interesting Frances Fitzgerald, who wore a gown of yellow satin and tulle, reaching to the ground. Her coat of gold and silver cloth was furred in fox.

In the intermissions I noted Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., talking to friends in her box. She was in deep rose velvet.

In another box Miss Sophia McCormick was entertaining Miss Neil Stewart, Mrs. Howard Evanson and Mrs. Thomas Ewing. Miss McCormick was in black, so was Miss Stewart. Mrs. Evanson chose a gown of coral velvet.

And just as I was leaving I caught sight of Mrs. William Brown, Jr., and Louise Reed. Both looked very smart in long gowns of black net.

And after the wedding there'll be a small reception in the home of the junior George C. Burgwins, of Bayard street.

After December 20 Mr. Wood and his bride will be at home on East Eighty-fifth street, New York, did you know?

Women Stage Minstrel Show

IN the "Cotton Pickers' Minstrel," given last night at East Liberty Carnegie Library, the Woman's Alliance of the First Unitarian Church sustained its reputation for originality. The minstrel had all the makings of a good show—music, dancing, costumes and real humor. One suspects Mrs. Edward B. Lee's ingenuity in the arrangement of these, and Mrs. Lee herself was one of the bright lights of the performance. Her make-up was perfect and, as George Washington Jones she was gorgeous in yellow satin, with a green glass cane and huge diamond ring. Not only was she one of the end "men," but she showed her versatility by dancing and playing the violin obligato for a solo by Mrs. B. O. Austin.

Mrs. T. C. Clifford was an imposing and handsome "Mr. White," the interlocutor. Besides Mrs. Lee, the "ends" were Mrs. Henry Cole, who danced and gave a monologue, and Mrs. Arthur B. Siviter and Mrs. Jane Packham Alexander, who, as Uncle Tom and Aunt Jemima, furnished a lot of the fun and did some effective singing. Marie Weber contributed two clever tap dances. Helen Pfordt Bigge did a Foster melody beautifully and Mrs. Harvey Fouse gave an original monologue in which she used the names of those in the audience. Mrs. James H. Greene deserves no end of credit for training the chorus of 25 really melodious voices and for directing them and the orchestra as well as accompanying at the piano.

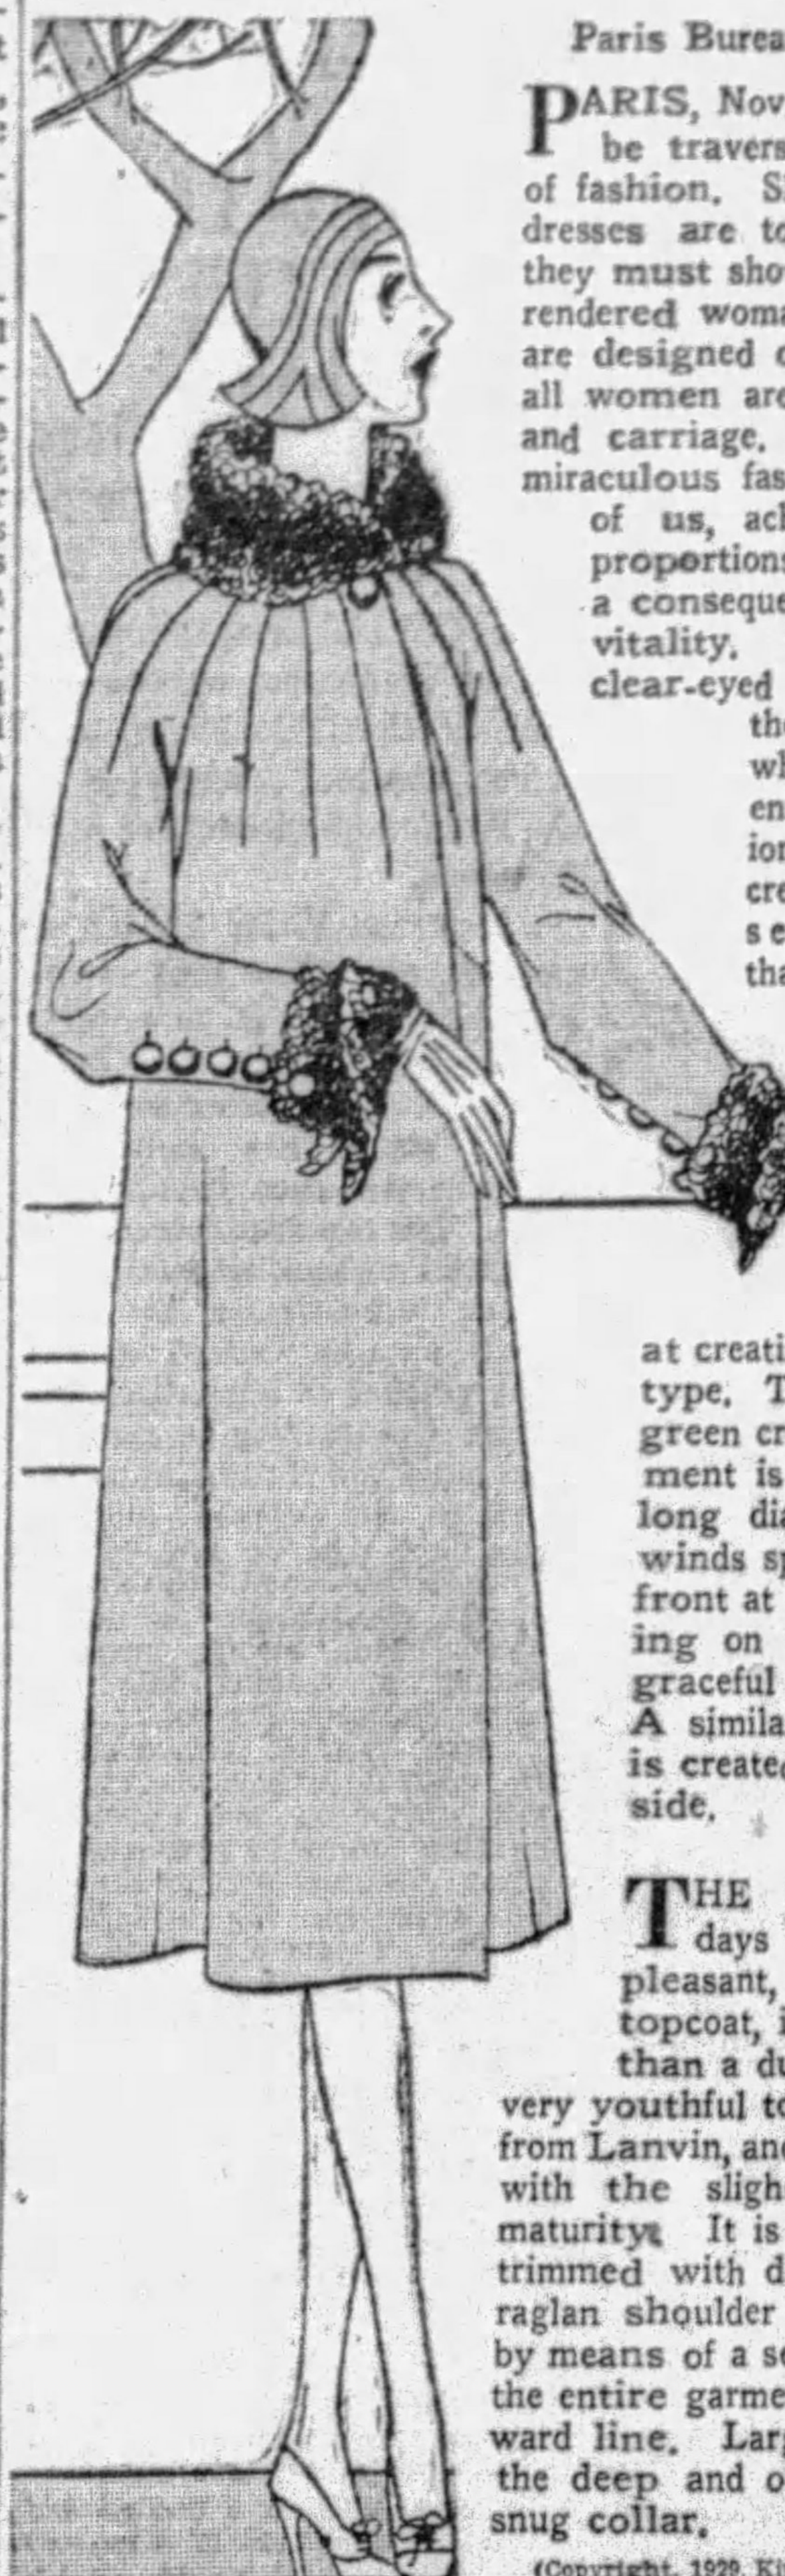
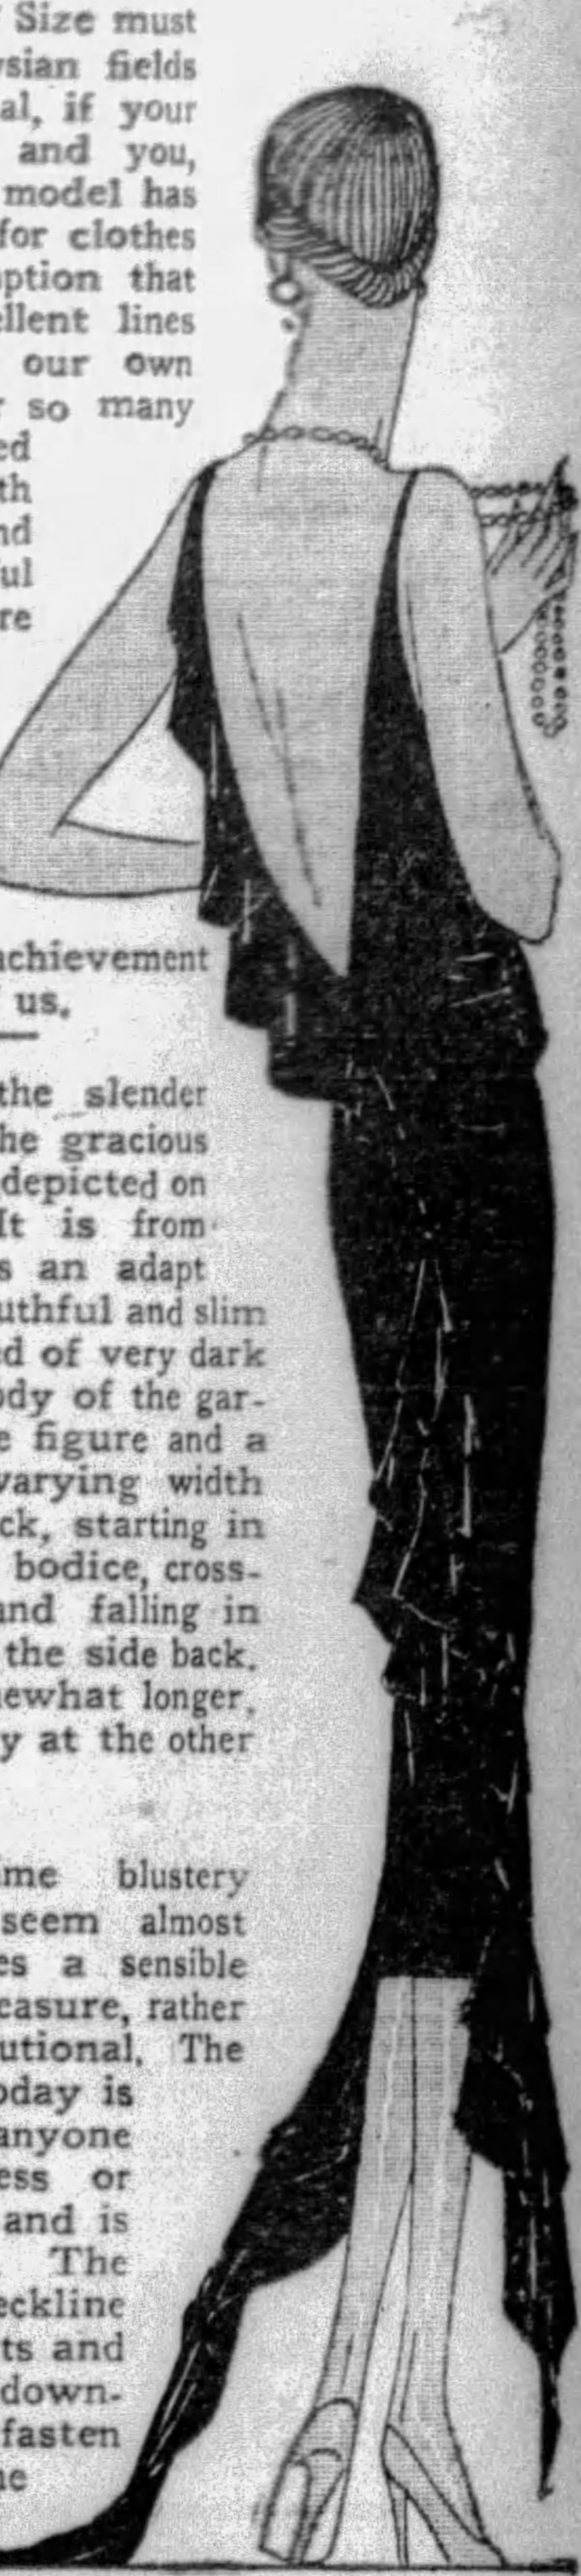
COUTURIERS DESIGN FASHIONS FOR YOUTH

—Sketched in Paris—





Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The Bridge of Size must be traversed to reach the Elysian fields of fashion. Slenderness is essential, if your dresses are to justify themselves and you, they must show good form. The model has rendered woman a signal service, for clothes are designed on the divine assumption that all women are slender, with excellent lines and carriage. And somehow in our own miraculous fashion, we have, ever so many of us, achieved the prescribed proportions and dimensions, with a consequent gain of health and vitality. The svelte,. graceful clear-eyed women of today are the women for whom the present lovely fashions have been created, and they set a standard that is well worth the effort of achievement by the rest of us.

BEHOLD the slender lines of the gracious evening frock depicted on this page. It is from Jenny, who is an adapt at creating clothes for the youthful and slim type. The frocks is fashioned of very dark green crepe romain. The body of the garment is fitted snugly to the figure and a long diagonal flounce of varying width winds spirally about the frock, starting in front at the right side of the bodice, crossing on the left shoulder, and falling in graceful folds to the floor at the side back. A similar trailing piece, somewhat longer, is created by the skirt drapery at the other side.

THE brisk and sometime blustery days of late Autumn seem almost pleasant, when one possesses a sensible topcoat, it then becomes a pleasure, rather than a duty to take a constitutional. The very youthful topcoat shown here today is from Lanvin, and is to be avoided by anyone with the slighest hint of bulkiness or maturity. It is of beige homespun and is trimmed with dark brown astrakan. The raglan shoulder is fitted into the neckline by means of a series of radiating darts and the entire garment has a flare in its downward line. Large gilt ball-buttons fasten the deep and original cuffs, and the snug collar.

MUSIC SYRIA MOSQUE "CARMEN"

J. Fred

George Bizet's "Carmen," the most popular of French operas, was sung by the French-Italian Opera Company in Syria Mosque last night. Whatever misgivings anyone has had regarding this company were immediately dispelled when the soloists entered, and if the chorus tottered a little in the first act, at the end of the evening we heard a climax in "Carmen's death scene as has ever been given by the best singers.

The story of the cigaret girl who goes to her doom through love is well known. In the opera she is an impassioned woman who understands her natural appeal, who frivolously plays it against every newcomer, and who would kill anyone who does not respond. Frances Peralta knows her Gypsy girl well. Her voice is rich with the passion of the south, and when she chooses to use the parlando she can make the spine of an audience shudder. Her openings scenes were played with remarkable restraint; the fury of the inn scene, and the gloom of her card scene were only premonitions of the grand flame on hearing the acclaim of her toreador and her own death.

Ralph Errolle was an admirable "Don Jose." His fine lyric voice again beautified the flower song, and was not lacking in color to intensify his excellent acting in the finale. Joseph Royer's "Escamillo" was easy playing, for the rcle takes care of itself dramatically, and if the "Toreador Song" is well done the listeners are his. With the other two principals he knew some original stage business, which proved how well they knew their texts. John Gurney, a young American basso, did a very resonant "Zuniga," showing a voice with big possibilities. Natale Cervi, San Carlo standby and a very gifted actor, with Paolo Calvino played the smugglers.

It is to be hoped that some stage manager some day will have originality enough to forbid the dress of "Micaela," who in her baby blue looks like an overstuffed doll (and this occurs in every opera company) rather than a simple Spanish peasant. We almost forgot this bad taste in listening to the charming voice of Alice Kurkjian, who, with a little extra breath, would be a very fine singer. Elynor Edson and Mignon Sutorius sang the roles of "Carmen's" friends.

Fulgenzio Guerrieri did wonders with a very inadequate orchestra, for if the singers strayed from pitch occasionally, it must have been that they could not get sufficient tone to give them their cues. His playing of the interludes was more than satisfactory.

Costumes of all the soloists were well studied and in good taste. A short ballet was danced by Karl Heinrich's dancers in the second act. The settings were fair.

This afternoon, Humperdinck's irresistible fairy opera "Hansel and Gretel" will be sung, and this evening Puccini's "La Boheme."

ALLEGHENY COUNTY
'Public Improvements Promote Progress'
Convinced that public improvements exert an important influence upon the progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County on January 1, 1924, initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.
CURVE ELIMINATIONS AND WIDENING—The County has made an earnest effort to eliminate and widen many of the dangerous curves on its 800 miles of roads, which greatly increases the safety to traffic.
To do this requires the obtaining of additional rights-of-way, removal of buildings, new construction work, building of roadway through property, and new culverts to cross ravines and creeks.
There have been a great many dangerous curves straightened out or widened to make travel over the County highways safe. More will be eliminated as rapidly as arrangements can be completed.

PRODUCES NEW HIGH SPEED STEELS

Firthite, Steel as Hard As Diamonds, Produced By Colonial Steel Co.

The Colonial Steel Company, located at Monaca on the left bank of the Ohio River, has served the tool steel needs of the Pittsburgh district for over 25 years.

All of the better grades of carbon and alloy tool steels are manufactured in its crucible and electric furnaces, while agricultural steels and other so-called tonnage grades are melted in small 30-ton open hearth furnaces. The raw materials for tool steel are pure puddled muck iron, suitable ferroalloy for the particular analysis desired and a small amount of selected scrap.

From the smelting to the finished bar there is constant supervision in the Colonial mill to make sure that no one of the strict specifications of the metallurgical department is overstepped. This means constant checking of soaking pits and heating furnaces, control of rolling and forging temperatures with optical pyrometers and a strick check on the important annealing process by means of recording electrical pyrometers. On final inspection, the surface of each bar is carefully gone over with a file and each end is topped or broken off to provide a close inspection of the grain structure.

SPECIAL STEELS

The product of the Colonial mill covers the whole range of tool steel grades from high speed steel containing 18 per cent of tungsten to straight carbon steels for blacksmith tools and digging bars; from the very finest steel used in engraving tools and surgical instruments to abrasion-resisting steel, such as the teeth in monster steam shovels.

In this plant was melted and rolled a large part of the steel used for driving rivets in the emergency fleet fabricated for war time purposes. This was a job that required tools of the greatest efficiency that would stand up under trying conditions. Colonial number seven, a vanadium steel melted in a crucible furnace, was found to be the steel that did the work best. This grade, improved with the advance of metallurgical science in the last 10 years, is still doing service in peace time industries where dies and tools of long wearing qualities are desired.

NEW PRODUCTS

A more recent development is Ohio die steel, the wearless die steel of the high carbon, high chrome class. The end of improvement in tool steels is not yet in sight. To keep one step ahead of the march of progress, the Colonial Steel Company maintains a large staff of metallurgists and chemists, both in its new laboratories at Monaca and in the field.

A constant study of customers' requirements is being made in order to segregate the more vital problems and collect data from which the metallurgical department can work out solutions. Sometimes it is a question of analysis, sometimes of heat treatment and quite often the practice of the user can be changed to secure better results. The tool steel industry is one in which the fullest confidence and co-operation between manufacturer and user is of the utmost importance and of mutual advantage to all concerned. The old days of secret formulas and mystic practices have little place in modern industry.

USES RIVERS

Situated as it is, between the Ohio River and the tracks of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, the Colonial Steel Company enjoys the unique advantage of receiving and shipping either by river or rail. With its modern furnaces it can produce any type of tool steel. In its hammer shop equipped with nine steam hammers, which deliver blows from 500 pounds up to 16,000 pounds, it can produce forgings of every variety. In its rolling mill department are three bar mills, two sheet mills, a plow mill, a plate mill and a blooming mill.

An annealing department, a heat treating department and an efficient inspection staff completes the setup which enables the Colonial Steel Company to serve the tool steel using trade in a satisfactory manner. Warehouse stocks of standard grades are carried not only at Monaca, but in 10 other manufacturing centers extending from Boston and New York on the Atlantic seaboard to Los Angeles on the Pacific.

Railroads Spend More for New Equipment

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—More money is being spent this year by the railroads of this country, in capital expenditures for new equipment and additions and betterments to property used in connection with the transportation service, than in either 1928 or 1927.

This was shown by a study prepared by the Bureau of Railway Economics and made public in connection with the annual meeting of the Association of Railway Executives at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago yesterday.

Capital expenditures, according to the study actually to be made this year will aggregate $800,000,000. This will be an increase of approximately $123,000,000 above such expenditures in 1928 and about $28,450,000 above those in 1927. Capital expenditures to be made this year are close to the annual average of the past six years.

The estimate as to total expenditures in 1929 for capital purposes is based on reports just received by the Bureau of Railway Economics which showed actual capital expenditures of $573,820,000 in the first nine months of 1929, compared with $500,167,000 in the same period in 1928, an increase of $73,653,000, or nearly 15 per cent.

Business Failures Fewer Than in 1928

The number of business failures in the United States this week totaled 472, compared with 404 last week and 476 for the corresponding period last year, R. G. Dun & Company report. It was explained that the number of insolvencies usually has an upward trend toward the close of the year.

Pittsburgh Plate Will Increase Profits

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

PITTSBURGH PLATE GLASS COMPANY is having the best year since 1925, according to the official estimate of profits for 1929 made following the directors' meeting yesterday. If the company shows the expected profits of $12,000,000 the present year's earnings will be equivalent to $5.57 a share on the 2,166,524 shares of capital stock, which is on a regular dividend basis of $2 and on which an extra dividend of $1 was declared yesterday.

Since the summer of 1925 the company has been facing the difficulty of doing business under sharply reduced prices for plate glass. A cut of 25 per cent in July of that year was followed by further declines which resulted in a total drop of over 40 per cent. Prices are still at this low level although an advance in the tariff on plate glass has tended to lighten the pressure of foreign competition.

As a result of this condition earnings showed a downward trend in 1925, 1926 and 1927. During the past two years economies resulting from improved production methods have greatly improved the company's position. Profit of $8,468,773, or $3.91 a share in 1928 represented an encouraging improvement over the results of 1927 when $6,430,356, or $3.27 a share was earned on the basis of the present capitalization.

Diversified Lines

THE company was able to withstand the unsettled condition of the glass trade far better than some of its competitors as a result of the diversified nature of its products. In addition to making both plate and window glass it produces paint, varnish, brushes, cement and a wide variety of chemicals. Most of these lines have been in a satisfactory condition. Paints in particular have been profitable and this branch of the business has grown rapidly. The popularity of fast drying lacquers materially stimulated sales.

New methods for making glass also served to help the company to meet the changed conditions in the industry. Economies are being shown from plants at which low cost continuous production methods have been installed and further reductions in costs will be accomplished upon the completion of improvement work now under way.

Expansion Program

IN spite of the fact that current business is uncertain, the company is planning to proceed with its $8,000,000 improvement program. This expenditure will not be concentreated at any one point or in any particular branch of the company's business. It will be used to increase efficiency at a large number of plants making glass, paints and chemicals.

The strong financial position of the company will allow it to carry out this program without resorting to any new financing. This follows the addition of over $2,000,000 to the property account during 1928.

No Funded Debt

THE company has no funded debt and no preferred stock. At the close of 1928 its current assets amounted to $45,992,069 against current liabilities of $5,287,201. Cash amounted to $2,807,088 and government and other securities totaled $14,358,258.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass has shown some wide fluctuations in earnings but it has never failed to pay a dividend in any year since 1899. It was one of the few organizations to pass through the deflation year of 1921 without showing a deficit.

ROAD CONTRACT PROGRESSES

Work on the paving of Brushton avenue by De Pasquale & Co. is nearing completion. Early this year the firm expanded into general road construction. It secured the services of Dan Di Nardo, who had wide experience in this work, to supervise its operations. Di Nardo had been with George S. White for about 40 years.

The firm of Diulus & De Pasquale was organized in 1920 with about 25 employes. Following the death of one of the partners in 1922 the company adopted its present name. It now employs 100 men. Among its recent contracts have been Bedford avenue, Pitt Stadium drive and Baldwin road.

Coal Prices Show No Change in Week

There has been but little change in the rate of production of bituminous coal, although the demand for domestic sizes shows some improvement. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted, per net ton at mines: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 to 90 cents, and gas slack, $1.00 to $1.10.

GLASS DEMAND UNSTEADY

The week presents no change in the flint glass industry from the standpoint of production, but there seems to be a slowing up in the retail end of the business, which is believed to be temporary, according to the National Glass Budget. The general feeling is that it is the customary lull that precedes the holiday rush. This, at least, is the belief of one distributor, who has been in business for a number of years.

What little jobbing demand there is covers the entire line of ware and indicates that the buying is for immediate needs and that when the holiday buying begins orders will specify immediate shipment. While this may be a possibility in many instances, it is a risk that is not advisable to take except in case of emergency. It is much better to anticipate one's needs and take no chance on losing a sale because immediate shipment cannot be promised.

The glass bottle business, especially that phase of it pertaining to containers, is showing signs of slowing down. The difference seems to be one of size rather than number of orders. The latter appears to be normal, but the quantity of ware called for is small. The reduction in the amount of ware sold does not seem to be affecting the production, as plants are reported to be operating at close to normal schedules.

Along with the slowing down of sales volume there continues to be keen competition which adversely affects prices and causes a certain amount of uncertainty and uneasiness in the business.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

STEEL OUTPUT DECLINES TO 70%

Stock Market Is Only One Of Three Factors in Production Slump.

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel ingot production in the past week was at nearly 70 per cent of capacity. It was high last May, at practically 100 per cent, and it was at approximately 85 per cent when the stock market began to crumble just one month ago. Production has decreased as much in one month as in the preceding five, but the important point is that production was already headed downward, and so rigorously that there was not the slightest upturn after July as regularly there has been unless conditions were decidedly peculiar.

There is always a seasonal decline at the end of the year, which may begin four to 10 weeks before December 31, according to circumstances. The stock market crash might easily cause the seasonal decrease to begin earlier than usual without that being an unfavorable augury as to the sharp rise that has regularly occurred after the turn of the year. The stock market is simply one of three elements in the total decline in steel production.

BULGE LAST YEAR

A special bulge in steel demand began at the middle of last year and in the last few months this bulge has been disappearing. There was a similar swing in industry generally, simply not so marked as in steel. The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production, manufacturing and mining, is a trustworthy representation. It is adjusted for seasonal variation. Taking the average of 1923-24-25 as 100, June, 1928, stood at 109, there having been an average increase of about two points per annum, which was natural and healthy, although a trifle slow considering increases in population and efficiency. June, 1929, showed 126, or 17 points rise in one year, which obviously was unnatural and perhaps unhealthy. Each of the following months brought a decrease, to 121 for September, the month just reported. An eight-point decline to next June would make 113 for that month which would represent a net gain of four points in two years, in keeping with the rate of gain up to June, 1928. Before the stock market began to break that would have been a perfectly reasonable thing to expect. The present period of activity and prosperity began on October 1, 1922, and in June, 1928, there was no economic reason for trade to begin increasing at a much greater rate than it had previously been increasing.

In rails, freight cars and fabricated structural steel there is backlog business as heavy as could ordinarily be expected, and insuring for the next few months engagement of between 20 and 25 per cent of the total steel making capacity. The remaining capacity, assignable to all other lines of steel consumption, will not be nearly as well engaged, a notable case being the automobile industry which a few years ago accounted for about 14 per cent of the total steel production, but at the recent peak about 25 per cent.

RAIL BUYING

The Rock Island has ordered 57,100 tons of rails, Illinois Central 40,000 tons and Boston and Maine 10,000 tons, making the season's total to date fully 1,200,000 tons. At this date last year and the year before there were only 850,000 to 900,000 tons on books. The buying has been earlier rather than heavier. Comparing identical roads, there is no change from two years ago, but about 10 per cent increase from a year ago.

Little freight car buying has been reported for a month past, but the car shops are fairly well supplied with work in building and repairing cars and a very fair amount of car buying is expected for the next few weeks.

Fabricated structural steel statistics make a remarkably favorable showing. Bookings of the fabricating shops in October were 342,650 tons, only 6 per cent under last August, the record high month, while shipments at 354,200 tons were a record high. The 10-month total of bookings is 18 per cent over the same period last year, although that in its turn had been record high. Bookings in the last 10 months were 9 per cent over shipments. The shops had a good order book January 1 and are in still better shape now.

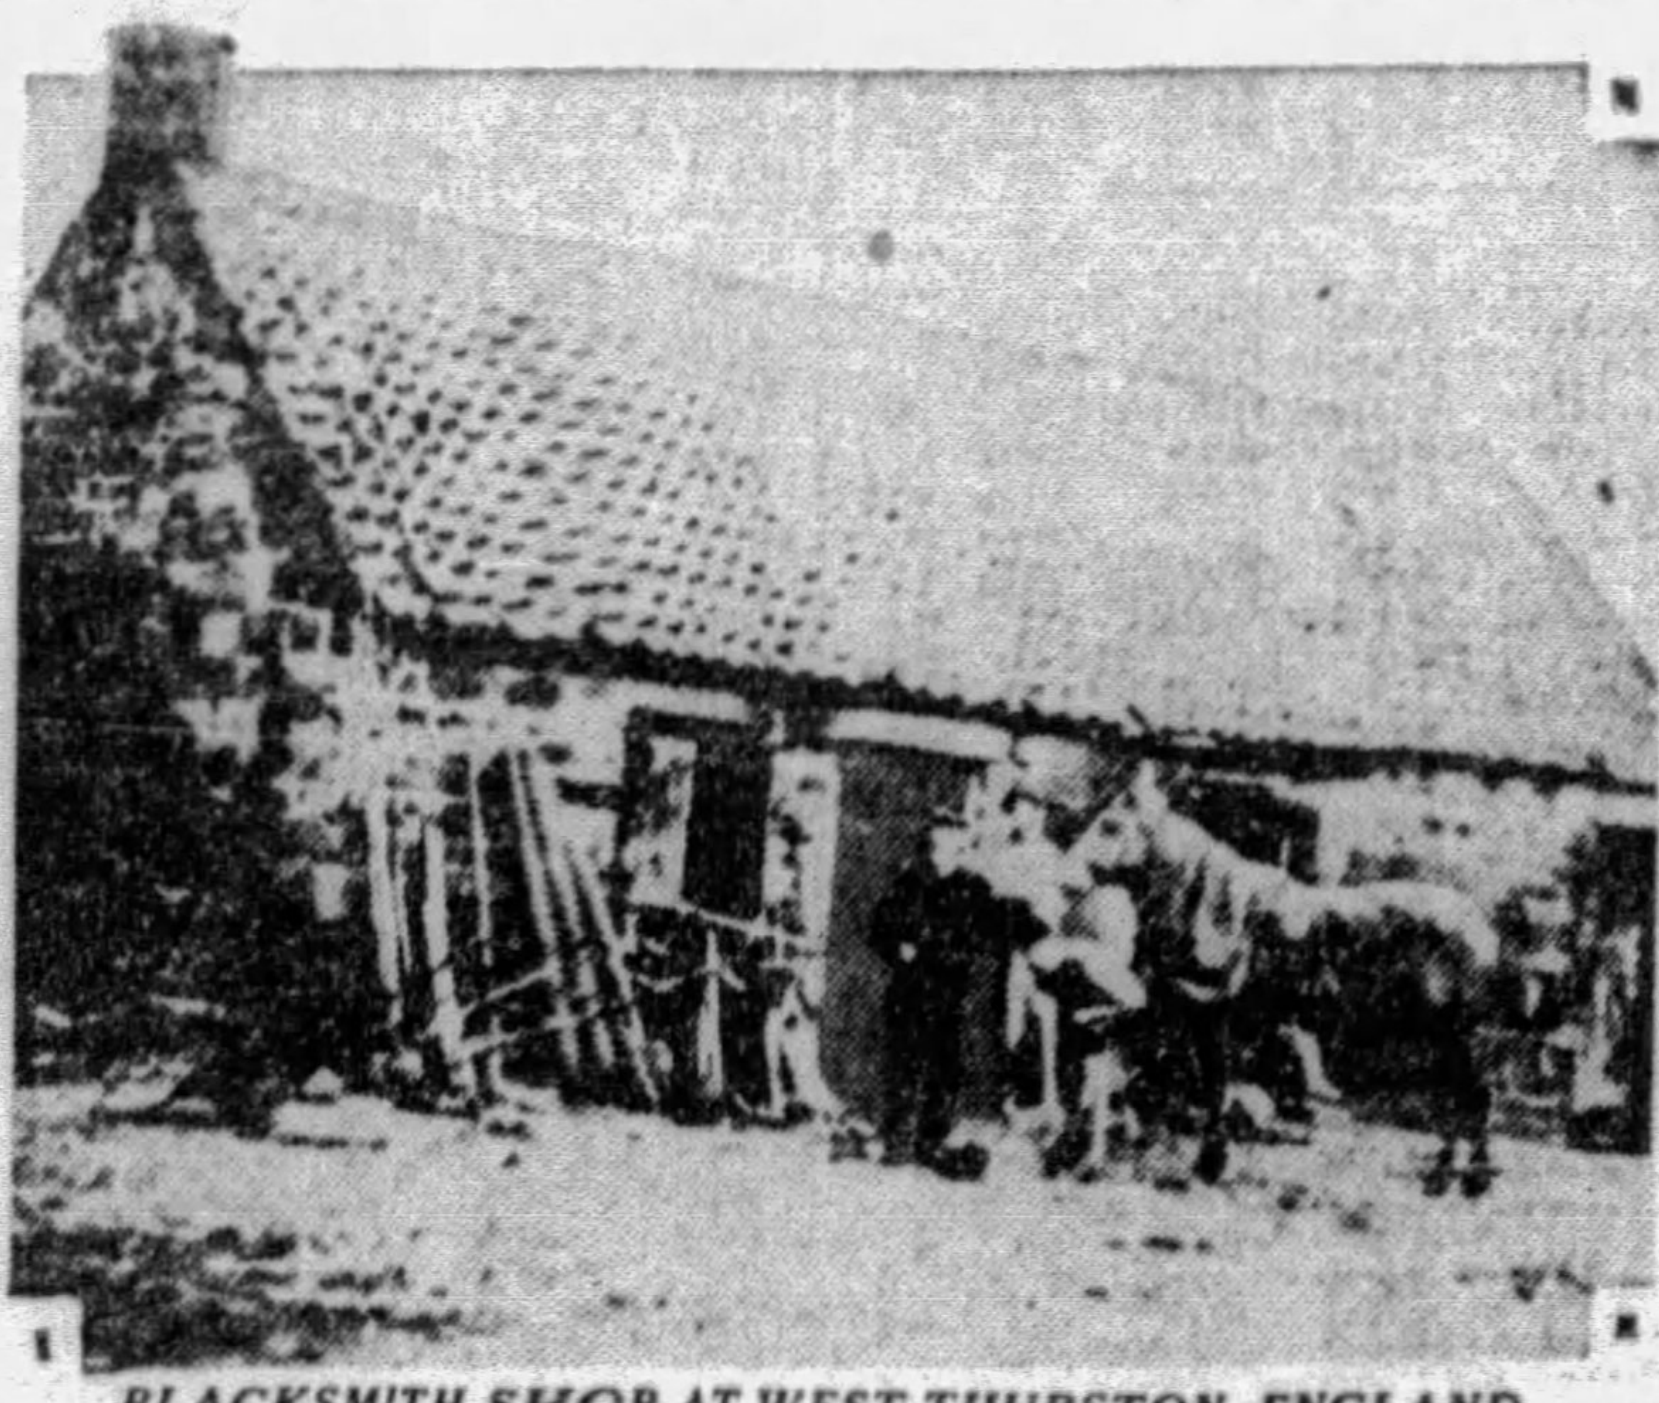
TIN PLATE

There has been a very fair volume of specifying for January tin plate shipments, and a good bit of contract business has been closed since the order books were opened Friday of last week at an unchanged price of $5.35. There are approximately even chances of this year's tin plate production making a new record and prospects for next year are quite favorable.

Finished steel prices are holding well. They did not advance as a rule during the bulge in demand, and thus they are not due for a decline. While there is little test of prices there is no visible pressure on the market.

Scrap has softened further and there is so little trading that prices, while appraised lower, are largely nominal.

ORIGINAL BLACKSMITHY



BLACKSMITH SHOP AT WEST THURSTON, ENGLAND

STARTED HERE CENTURY AGO

The Marshall Brothers Company, of Pittsburgh, is one of our earliest manufacturing institutions, having been founded on Smithfield street, between Fourth avenue and Diamond street, in 1818. The family arrived in Canada from the Village of West Thurston, Northumberland County, England, on September 9, 1818, crossed Niagara River and reached the headwaters of the Allegheny River, where they built a raft and floated to Pittsburgh.

The Marshalls were blacksmiths and mechanics and, a short time after arriving here, opened a blacksmith shop on Smithfield street. In a few years they acquired property in what was then known as Diamond alley, next to the Grand Opera House, which is now occupied by the Frank & Seder Company. In 1903, when Diamond street was widened, the Marshall company moved to larger quarters at Twenty-first and Mary streets, South Side, where they continued the manufacturing of freight and passenger elevators, begun many years ago in Diamond street.

John Marshall and his wife, Mary Hawdon, were married near New Castle-on-Tyne in 1803. Their children were William, a Methodist minister; John, Joseph A., and Michael, who formed the Marshall Brothers Company. Robert H. Marshall, one of Pittsburgh's pioneer iron manufacturers and a partner of Graft Bennett & Co. for many years on West Carson street, was the grandfather of Frank and Ralph Marshall Dravo, of the Dravo Contracting Company.

The management of the Marshall Brothers Company is in the care of L. H. Marshall, son of the late George V. Marshall, and great-grandson of John Marshall, and George T. Marshall, a son of the late Robert Marshall, who was a cousin of the Marshall brothers.

Marshall elevators of an unusual design have recently been erected for the Pennsylvania Railroad Station at Sewickley, Pa. The Carnegie Steel Company, Homestead plant, has the largest elevator in the state, having a capacity of 45,000 pounds, using a car 15 feet by 34 feet.

SEE BUILDING GAINS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Stabilization of the stock market at moderate levels and a recession in the volume of stock speculation should have a beneficial effect on the volume of construction contracts awarded, in the opinion of the Associated General Contractors of America.

The decline in contract awards evidenced so far this year by a 25 per cent reduction in the commitments for residential construction, as shown by the statistics of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, is seen as a result of difficulties in arranging for financing. With funds from all over the country actively employed in stock speculation, financing for local construction has been difficult to secure, especially for apartment house and hotel construction, it is claimed.

This recession in residential construction contract commitments has only just begun to affect the demand for labor and construction materials. The volume of construction job activities during October as indicated by shipments of basic construction materials declined 26 points to Index number 233. Despite this drop in October the level of job activities during the first 10 months of 1929 was only one-half of 1 per cent less than the volume of activities for the same period in 1928.

The maintenance of job activities in the face of a recession of contract awards is accounted for by the existence of the carry-over of uncompleted contracts into this year. Unless financing soon becomes available for contemplated residential construction that is being held up it is believed that the volume of construction activities will recede to levels proportionate to the volume of contract awards.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—At a special stockholders 'meeting of Quincy Mining an increase in capital stock to 250,000 shares of $25 par from 200,000 shares was authorized.

Directors were empowered to offer this increased stock pro rata to stockholders at no less than par, but no offering will be made at this time, due to current market conditions.

SEES NEED FOR NEW CITY SYSTEM

Evans Wants Municipal Departments to Adopt New Business Methods

By HENRY O. EVANS,
City Controller.

Probably the largest single payroll in the United States is that of the various governmental agencies, federal, state, municipal and local, which are spending approximately $10,000,000,000 per year. If a private business faced constantly increasing costs, how would it go about reducing them?

The first step would be to analyze the totals in order to ascertain the percentage of increase for each department, then would come improvement of methods and machinery, and, finally, readjustment of wages to effect greater production per man, with lowered costs per unit of production.

BUSINESS METHODS

Is this method of private business applicable to our greatest industry, the business of running our political affairs? We have demonstrated in the controller's office of the city of Pittsburgh that it is applicable. By putting into force modern methods, in place of antiquated ones, we have reduced costs about 20 per cent while at the same time giving promptness and efficiency never before known in this office.

Can any further progress be made? There is no co-ordinated control of receipts by the city. A similar reorganization of receipts will yield equal if not greater savings. Under such a system it would no longer be possible to drop $60,000 from the city's books, as has been done under the present system. We should, then, have the same accounting control over receipts as we have over disbursements. There is little doubt that great actual savings would result.

BETTER CONTROL

Again our great municipal corporation should record and control its material and supplies in exactly the same way as efficient private business. As it is now, every department not only buys, but uses or loses its material and supplies without reference to any other department. Budgeting customary and common purchases as a whole, central storehouse accounting and distributing and bulk purchases, instead of piecemeal, would certainly eliminate waste now present and cut down costs.

Few modern private businesses use cash payrolls, but every city employe, except the Councilmen, about 7,000 in number, is paid in cash. Payment by check is up-to-date, efficient, economical. Why cling to the past?

These are only a few of many instances in which the city might well take a leaf from the experience of private business. In spite of ourselves municipal costs will increase because the demands of the public on government are daily increasing. Without the use of modern methods and machinery we shall certainly deprive ourselves of good things, ardently desired.

Shall we progress? It can be done

Air Pioneer

C. P. MAYER

OPENED FIRST AIRPORT

One of Pittsburgh's pioneers in aircraft development is C. P. Mayer, president of the Mayer Aircraft Corporation. In 1918 he purchased his first plane and operated the first airport in Western Pennsylvania. The Mayor-Milnor Aircraft Corporation was formed in that year and in 1921 the business was incorporated under its present name.

In the early days the business was distinctly hazardous. Obsolete government planes were the only ships available. In looking back over the history of his company's early efforts, Mr. Mayer recalls many instances which are good for a hearty laugh.

When the first ship came to Mayer Field, it overshot its boundary into the garden of a neighbor. He immediately set up a profit-sharing policy and charged $25 for three green tomatoes that were crushed. No other damage was done.

PAID $25

C. M. Mayer, who was in charge of Mayer Field at the time, paid $25 for the privilege of withdrawing the ship 10 feet onto Mayer Field. That, however, was not the only excitement of the day. When the ship circled the town before landing it created such an excitement that all the people of Bridgeville quit work and came to the field to see the strange creature that arrived by air. There were very few people in the community who had seen an airplane before, let alone being air-minded enough to ride in one.

A remark often heard when one asked a bystander to take a ride was, "I will if I can keep one foot on the ground."

Of course, it is a known fact that in those days the airplane business was a losing game. It was never self-supporting until Lindbergh made his trans-Atlantic flight. Then the business increased fully 300 per cent.

EXPECT GAINS

The management is constantly looking forward to a continued increase in business. The airplanes are faster and greatly improved over the old types. To a greater extent we are getting away from the water-cooled engine and adopting air-cooled motors. The cabin ships have come to stay and the open cockpit is passing, as the cabin ship carries more passengers at the same expense.

The Mayer Aircraft Corporation not only conducts a flying field, but also a flying school. Some of the students are now holding positions on the leading mail and passenger air lines in the country. At the present time Mayer Flying School has approximately 30 students. Most of these boys are in the flying game to stay, some few for pleasure, one with the idea of making a trans-Atlantic flight, another to advance his knowledge and work out a plan he has in his mind to revolutionize the air industry by operating ships from more congested districts.

Discount Placed on Canadian Shipments

Due to the drop in Canadian exchange the Grand Trunk Railway and other carriers handling traffic into the Dominion have announced a discount of 1 per cent on charges on shipments sent from this country into Canada when freight charges are billed collect. The discount will be in effect until November 30. It was started on November 15.

BALDWIN LOCO. ORDERS UP

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—The Baldwin Locomotive Works will ship approximately $3,500,000 of business in November, which is equal to about 35 per cent rate of operation. It is expected that operations in December will be as large as this month, and possibly slightly higher.

Samuel Vauclain, chairman of the board, said Baldwin has more orders on hand today than it has had in two years, while the wholly-owned standard steel works has more business than at any time in three years.

Business is also increasing with the Midvale Company, controlled by Baldwin.

Spring Wheat Area Plans Own Co-Op.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Formation of a single co-operative association representing the spring wheat area, as a connecting link between the farmers of affected states and the Farmers National Grain Corporation, will be considered by a special committee of farm marketing agencies Monday, it was announced here.

The committee represents the farmers grain dealers' associations, wheat pools of Minnesota, South Dakota and Montana-North Dakota and the Farmers Union Terminal Association of St. Paul.

Back to Normal; Ford Surprises; Oil Men Happy

By B. C. FORBES

HENRY FORD again has done the unexpected. In the midst of the enthusiasm engendered at Thursday's Washington conference he declared: "We will announce a general wage increase in our plants very shortly." Detroit dispatches say that his announcement took his own associates by surprise as they had not figured upon such sudden action. Mr. Ford's prepared statement did not contain the big news.

This column recently mentioned talk common in Detroit that Ford was planning important changes in various models.

From what should be highly authoritative sources in Detroit comes a communication that no important changes of specifications are contemplated. Certain it is that Ford has had no reason to complain about the reception accorded his product. The demand quickly exceeded all expectations.

THE stock market this week has acted entirely normally. Do not rush to the conclusion, however, that it must keep on rising day after day without recession. That would be neither logical nor healthy.

Already stocks selected during typhoon Tuesday show a substantial profit. These profits will one day become very much more substantial.

HAVING purchased both General Motors and Du Pont stocks at panic prices, I was interested in getting from Lammont Du Pont, president of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., a clear-cut explanation of how far Du Pont earnings are dependent upon General Motors dividends. Since these stocks are tremendously widely owned throughout the country, the facts furnished by Mr. Du Pont will interest many. After explaining 1928 earnings and the split-up of Du Pont stock, he states:

"General Motors yesterday sold at 41½. Ninety-seven cents multiplied by 41½, or approximately $40, represents the market price of the General Motors common stock back of each share of Du Pont common stock. Deducting $40 from the 105½, at which the Du Pont common sold, leaves $65.50 as the market price of Du Pont common ex General Motors.

"DuPont common ex General Motors earned $2.23 on the present stock in 1928 and might be roughly estimated to earn $2.87 in 1929. Obviously Du Pont common ex General Motors alone and Du Pont common (the composite of Du Pont and General Motors) can be bought.

"In purchasing Du Pont common one must keep in mind that he is buying a certain portion of General Motors stock and a certain portion of Du Pont ex General Motors."

THOSE who imagine that stock brokers have profited enormously by recent events will be astounded to learn that the value of a seat on the New York Stock Exchange has tumbled $144,000, or almost 30 per cent, while a New York Curb seat has sold at a decrease of $100,000, or 40 per cent. There is no profit in that for those owning memberships.

Mistakes made in the execution of orders have cost brokers a bitter penny—in some cases well into six figures. Also, there have been instances of heavy losses on accounts closed out when additional margins were not supplied. "I'll be delighted if I can break even since the trouble began," one well-known Stock Exchange member assured me.

"I HAVE just returned," President H. A. Scandrett, of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, tells me, "from a trip covering parts of our lines in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota. Among the people I talked with there was little mention made of the stock market and apparently no anticipation of any general impending depression in business. This is encouraging to me."

AN ORDER for 100,000 shares of Electric Bond and Share, good for the day, was given by an influential interest on Thursday.

MAYBE Ken Kingsbury, the able president of Standard Oil of California, will not object to my printing these sentences from a letter just received from him:

"The prospects of the oil industry out here are rosier than they have been for years.

"That does not mean immediate increased profits, but through the many savings that can be brought about with the balance of production and consumption, increased profits will come, and I believe can come without any material advance in the price of gasoline to the consuming public. The present curtailment agreement runs for only ninety days, but it is a tremendous start in the right direction, and I hope for a continuance of restricted production upon the expiration of the present agreement. Everybody now seems to be happy."

Stock Exchange Topics

Kennecott Copper Showed 10 Per Cent Yield At Low Point.

AT its low point Kennecott was showing a yield of 10 per cent on the current dividend of $5 a share. Among the coppers any recovery could find this stock among the outstanding leaders. There was a smaller speculative outside following in Kennecott than in many other issues in this group, but the necessitous selling in the past came into the issue also because some interests disposed of the stock to protect long positions in others. Meanwhile, on the reaction, there was scale accumulation for the account of important interests in the company who insist that even with a smaller demand for copper metal Kennecott can make a comparatively favorable showing.

By-Products Coke recently has undertaken a large expansion program, acquiring a permanent ore supply through affiliation with the Pickands-Mather interests and also several new furnace properties. Already a large merchant pig iron factor in the Chicago area, By-Products Coke will make iron in the future at Toledo, Erie, Pa., and Duluth. Annual dividend rate is $1 a share on the common and should be earned nearly three times over this year. Increased earnings from the acquisitions should result in a continuation of nearly the same rate of revenues on the larger amount of stock to be presently outstanding.

AS measured by the weekly condition statements of the Federal Reserve Bank and the system, the credit position is all that could be desired. In the New York district the statement of the local bank shows the total of reserve credit outstanding was reduced by $7,000,000 during the week, this combining with a drop of about $60,000,000 in member deposits to bring a rise of about 1.6 per cent in the ratio to 80.3 per cent. For the system a reduction of $76,000,000 in the total of reserve credit outstanding is revealed, this with a drop of $83,000,000 in member deposits resulting in a rise of 1.7 per cent in the ratio to 71.2 per cent at which level it compared with a ratio of 68.4 per cent in the corresponding week last year.

In periods like those existing recently, sight is lost of favorable influences, but there are a number of underlying constructive factors which must eventually come in for consideration. These can be enumerated as follows: Big corporations are lending money and not borrowing it to carry heavy inventories as on occasions in the past. Several of the companies have eliminated funded debt to a considerable extent with money received from the sale of common stock. Managements of the leading industrials are showing their confidence in the soundness of the business situation by special benefits to stockholders either through increased regular dividends, extra cash distributions or stock disbursements. Cause of the sharp drop in stocks was in the technical condition within the stock market itself, for fundamental industrial conditions were satisfactory, with nothing more than a seasonal let-down in sight in some lines. Numerous high-grade issues now are selling at much more favorable ratios to earnings than at any other time this year.

SIGNIFICANCE was attached to the conference of industrial leaders in Washington, which followed the meeting of railroad executives earlier in the week. It was known, of course, that as a result of the conference the heads of industries would be expected to carry out their programs of expansion and construction to aid in checking any serious curtailment of the purchasing power of the public by keeping employment on as large a scale as possible.

There is no doubt that discrimination is being used by the public. The experience during the sharp break in the market earlier this month has dissipated the unwarranted enthusiasm which prevailed during strength. In the future more attention will be paid to past performances, dividend returns and prospects for earnings and dividends.

BIG PURCHASES PLEDGED BY RAILROADS

Aishton Outlines Expansion Program in Message to Hoover From Convention

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—President Hoover's campaign for maintaining business on an even keel has sagged in spectacular stage settings, but moved forward significantly in new pledges of specific business projects.

After the chief executive conferred at the White House with spokesmen for the pivotal construction industry, who explained that they only take other people's orders and carry them out, Mr. Hoover received a telegram from R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway Association, which has been in convention in Chicago to the effect that the railways will be larger buyers in the coming transitional months.

OUTLINES PROGRAM

Mr. Aishton outlined the expanded developmenta program of the railroads, and added after consulting the principal railroad executives of the country that they "have no purpose whatever to reduce or abandon any part of this program," inasmuch as they do not believe that "there is anything in present conditions to warrant it." They are proceeding, Mr. Aishton explained, with confidence in the business prosperity of the country and in reliance upon the full co-operation of industry in all its branches equally interested under these circumstances.

Getting down to brass tacks, Mr. Aishton revealed that the program of capital expenditures already arranged (as of October 1) amounted to $1,247,792,000, of which $673,972,000 on that date remained to be expended. The program represented an increase of 38 per cent over that in the corresponding period of 1928.

MORE CARS ORDERED

Likewise, the number of freight cars in order on October 1 was 29,482, a greater figure than on the corresponding date of any year since 1924. On November 1, this figure had risen to 33,642, which is a gain of 27,561, compared with the same date a year ago. Moreover, on October 1 there were 354 locomotives on order, compared with 113 on the same date in 1928 and 134 in 1927. Mr. Aishton added that the railroads also have on order 1,500,000 tons of steel rails for delivery beginning early in 1930, and that total rail purchases next year will probably reach 2,500,000 tons, a figure substantially in excess of purchases in 1929.

As a matter of fact, the railroads at the time of the recent stock market collapse were at the threshold of a significant expansion program, after several years of subnormal buying. The enlarged railroad program, which is to be continued, reflects the fact that the total earnings of Class 1 railways in the United States will be larger in the calendar year 1929 than in any previous 12 months in the history of the country. Mr. Aishton's announcement significantly discloses that the railroads have no intention f canceling this new adventure of spending on an expanded scale.

COPPER SALES SHOW GAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Copper sales for export by larger producers this morning were 3,500,000 pounds, the largest sales for several weeks. It is believed that domestic buying will show improvement in the next few days and that European buying next week will be in fair volume.

Despite rumors in stock market circles that a break in price of copper is impending, there is no foundation for that statement at this time and not improbably it was put out by some wanting to get some copper shares at a cheap price.

Producers are in a strong position financially. Stocks of copper are not excessive and curtailment should be sufficient to meet the situation.

NO CHILDREN, COUPLE PART

A conflict as to children disrupted their marriage, Mrs. Helen L. O'Neil, of 4414 Fifth avenue, testified in her divorce suit against Robert Dey O'Neil, of Irwin avenue, North Side, at a hearing before Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Common Pleas Court. They were married in Spokane, Wash., in 1910 and moved to Coraopolis in 1914. O'Neil was manager of the Vulcan Detinning Company, Neville Island.

Mrs. O'Neil testified she was fond of children and her husband was not and that they had none by their marriage. He frequently sent her away on trips, she testified, finally telling her it would be best for them to part. She left him in July, 1921, and a divorce action she brought soon afterwards was not pressed because she hoped for a reconciliation, Mrs. O'Neil declared.

A suit asking $50,000 damages for the death of Thomas Smith, 59, Pittsburgh policeman, fatally injured by an automobile, was filed in Common Pleas Court by Thomas Smith, Jr., administrator of the estate, against Elizabeth M. Levy. Her automobile ran over the sidewalk on South Braddock avenue September 7, last, and struck Smith, who was patroling his beat, and as a result he died September 29, the suit alleged.

VITAPHONE

with its perfect presentation of one of the theatre's great masterpieces!

GEORGE ARLISS in "DISRAELI"

If you have cheers, prepare to give them now. For with George Arliss in "Disraeli" the art of Talking Pictures enters a new phase!

Experts have been predicting that it would take ten years to perfect the audible film. The experts were wrong! For here is that perfection, achieved by Vitaphone years ahead of time!

Not only has Vitaphone transplanted every atom of dramatic power, superb suspense, and rapier wit that made George Arliss' "Disraeli" one of the historic stage successes of the century... It has done more than that... In a single stride it has not only attained but actually surpassed the stage's artistic standards, which thousands felt the screen could never even equal!

The fascination of the footlights fades before the larger lure of mammoth settings—Vitaphone's crisp, telling dialogue that seems to come from someone next to you—subtle shadings of expression that convey thoughts as well as words to every corner of the house—and a George Arliss of heightened stature and new intimacy, exceeding even the amazing brilliance of his classic stage performance,

Come! See for yourself! Let Vitaphone put you "on speaking terms" with Disraeli, amazing man of destiny who rose from obscurity to control a modern empire—all because he knew how to handle women—especially a Queen!

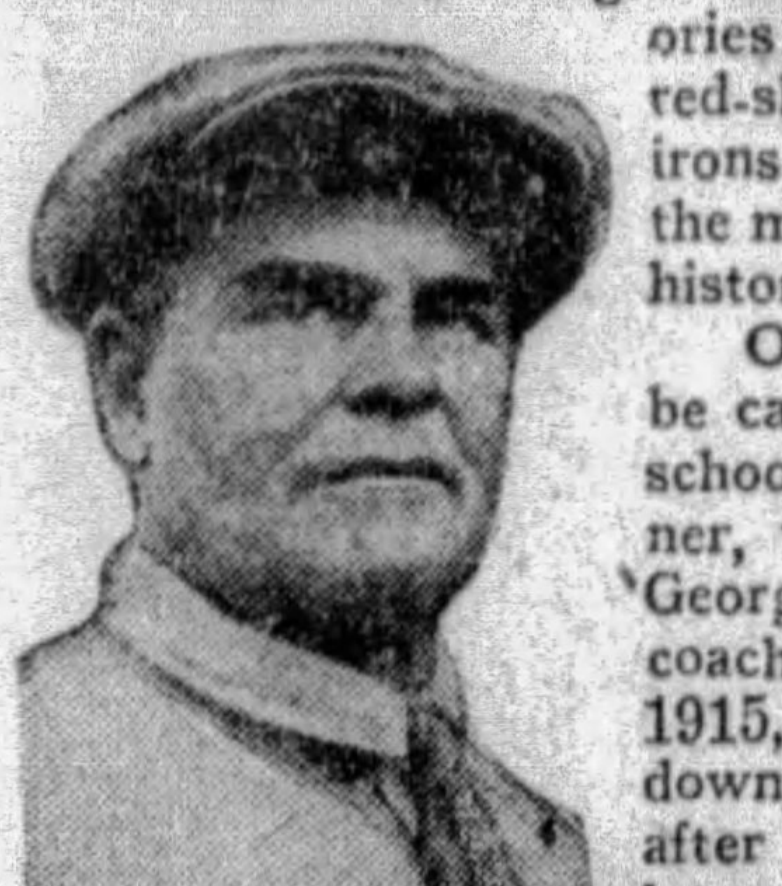
INDIANS STAND OUT IN GRID HISTORY

THE appearance of the Haskell Indians, of Lawrence, Kan., in Pittsburgh today for their football game with the Dukes at Forbes Field brought back to the fans of this section memories of the days when another band of red-skinned athletes roamed the gridirons of the country and wrote one of the most colorful chapters in the sport's history under the name of Carlisle.



Pop Warner.

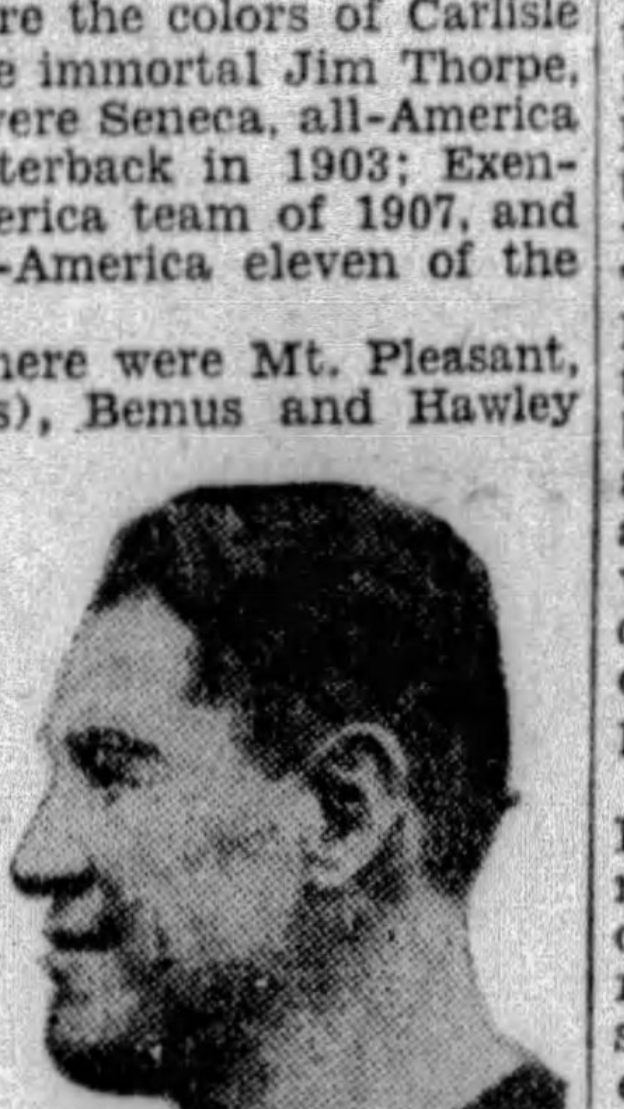
Only among the things that used to be can any mention of that old Indian school be made now. After Pop Warner, who had followed Bemus Pierce, George Woodruff and Frank Hudson as coach there in 1907, came to Pitt in 1915, Carlisle's teams began to go downhill. The game was abandoned after the season of 1917, and a year later the school was converted into a government hospital for soldiers disabled in the World War. But the fame of the wonderful and tricky elevens that once were wont to humble such topliners as Pitt, Harvard, Princeton, Penn, Penn State, Syracuse, Nebraska, Chicago, Minnesota, Navy, Brown, Vanderbilt and others has been in no wise dimmed by the flight of time.

CARLISLE'S stars had everything that goes to make up a great football team, and with their natural power and speed they combined deceptive trickery that often bewildered the most alert opponents. There was the time, for instance, when Dillon tucked the ball under his jersey and ran through Harvard's unsuspecting ranks for a touchdown.

On another occasion, when the redskins came on the field, every man in the lineup had the semblance of a football painted in yellow on his jersey so that the members of the enemy outfit could not determine what player was carrying the real pigskin. They were forced to discard those jerseys by the officials, but every time they were stopped at one trick they soon came up with another.

SOME of the greatest players of all time wore the colors of Carlisle with the passing years. In addition to the immortal Jim Thorpe, all-America halfback in 1911 and 1912, there were Seneca, all-America halfback in 1899; Johnson, all-America quarterback in 1903; Exendine, named as an end on the second all-America team of 1907, and Hauser, placed at halfback on the third all-America eleven of the same year.

And those were only a few of them. There were Mt. Pleasant, Hudson, Balenti (all great field-goal kickers), Bemus and Hawley Pierce, Welch, Miller, Calac, Guyon, Dietz, Charles (father of one of Hackell's present halfbacks), Newashe, Gardner, Matlock, Waseuka, Arcasa, Wheeler, Metoxen, Garlok, Bracklin, Albanez, Hendricks, Kennedy, Powell, Bowen, Lubo, Porter, Jude, Redwater, Little Old Man, Two Hearts, the Libbys and others. The Pierces, Miller and Hudson later played on the D. C. & A. C. or Homestead professional teams here.



Jim Thorpe.

CARLISLE saw football undergo vast changes and played a considerable part in the development of the game to its present state. When the forward pass was introduced in 1906, the Indians were among the first to realize on its possibilities. While perfecting the play they appeared in a game at Exposition Park here with the men eligible to receive the pass wearing headgears of a color different from those worn by the other players, so that the passer would be aided in aiming his throws.

IT WAS in the same year that the distance to be gained was changed from five yards in three downs to 10 yards in three downs, and the time of game was reduced from 70 minutes to 60 minutes, divided into halves.

It was not until 1910 that the present system of four 15-minute periods was introduced, and it was not until 1912 that the fourth down was added. In 1912 also the length of the field was reduced from 110 to 100 yards, and the kickoff point was moved back to the 40-yard line of the kicking side.

SO IT will be seen that Carlisle figured in both old and new football. And the Indians continued to shine no matter what the rules. They played everybody, everywhere. Whereas modern teams consider eight or nine games all they can carry in a season, the Indians played 13 or 14 every fall.

And they scorned letdowns. In 1907, they met Penn State, Syracuse, Bucknell, Penn, Princeton, Harvard, Minnesota and Chicago in a row. All this on the road, too. In 1908 they jumped in succession from State College, to Syracuse, to Philadelphia, to Annapolis, to Cambridge, to Pittsburgh, to Minneapolis, to St. Louis, to Lincoln, to Denver. By way of a change in another year they trooped down into Tennessee and Virginia. Iron men as well as great football players. They surely left behind them a monument that will endure as long as the game itself.

Earl Averill.

DURING one of the Boston Braves' series at Forbes Field this year, Johnny Evers remarked during a fanning bee that experience had taught him baseball players would often find it more profitable to put their trust in the fairness of the big league magnates—or some of them—than to be annually haggling over salary matters. Outfielder Earl Averill and First Baseman Lew Fonseca, of the Indians, appear to have taken Evers' words to heart, for it has just been learned that at the close of the American League season last month the two walked into the offices of the Cleveland club and signed BLANK contracts for 1930, leaving it to their employers to fill in the figures. Both had big seasons, too. Fonseca led the league in batting with an average of .369, and Averill batted .331 in his first year as a major leaguer.

WRITING from Braddock, A. M. D. asks what players were named on the official all-America football team of 1924 and whether Elmer Layden was picked on any of the three elevens. That was the last year in which the late Walter Camp picked an all-America team. He selected Bjorman, of Dartmouth, and Berry, of Lafayette, at the ends; McGinley, of Penn, and Weir, of Nebraska, at the tackles; Slaughter, of Michigan, and Horrell, of California, at the guards; and Garbisch, of Army at Center.

In the backfield he named Stuhldreher, of Notre Dame, at quarterback; Grange, of Illinois, and Koppisch, of Columbia, at the halves, and Hazel, of Rutgers, at fullback. Layden, one of the Four Horsemen on Notre Dame's undefeated team of that year, was not named on the second or third all-America eleven, receiving only honorable mention among the backs.

THE old story dating back to Sullivan-Corbett fight and the later days of Peter Maher, that possession of a knockout wallop doesn't mean anything in the ring unless you can land it, was told again in New York last night when the superior punching ability of Harry Ebbets failed to save him from defeat at the hands of Rene DeVos. The success of DeVos in winning the decision through superior all-around class puts him in line again for a middleweight title shot, but he has been such an in-and-outer that there is no telling whether that is going to mean anything to the Belgian or not.

Black Bill's decision victory over the previously sensational Eugene Huatt, of France, in a semi-final of the flyweight title series, upset the dope that the Frenchman was the coming champion of the

BUCS EXPECT FAST, CLOSE BATTLE

By CARL W. SHATTO.

The New York Rangers, who aspire to the world hockey championship that they held two years ago and who are greeted with respectful silence when they make their aspirations known, will help local ice fans to find out whether or not the Pirates' greatly improved form is of the durable variety when they meet the local puckmen at Duquesne Garden at 8:30 tonight.

In their opening game, a week ago, the Bucs lost to the Montreal Maroons, 5-2, but in their second start, Tuesday, the Pirates showed surprisingly brilliant form in breaking the National League scoring record at the expense of the Toronto Leafs, 10-5.

OFF TO GOOD START

The Rangers already have met the Maroons twice this season, and in both engagements the New Yorkers emerged victorious over the puckmen who spoiled the locals' lid-lifter. Moreover, the invaders have won three of their first four games, and they suffered their only setback at the hands of the world champion Bruins, in Boston, by the narrow margin of 3 to 2. It is generally conceded that the Rangers are the club that the Bostonians will have to beat out if they are to retain the American Group and world titles they won in the 1928-29 campaign.

In three of the four games which served to put the Rangers on edge for their engagement here the visitors have held the opposition to one, two and three goals, respectively, so it is not at all likely that the Bucs will be able to continue the mad scoring pace which they set against Toronto. The Toronto defense which the locals had to bewilder to establish their record was a veteran combination of better than average ability, however, and it is probable that Benny Leonard's forces will rule about an even money choice against the speed merchants from the Big City.

LOWREY MAY NOT PLAY

With the exception of Jerry Lowrey, flashy young spare wingman, all of the Pirates are in top condition for a torrid fray. Lowrey is suffering from a badly sprained ankle, and he has not donned skates since last Tuesday night. Manager Frank Frederickson would rather rest his star and lose a game than shove him into the lineup and run the risk of making his injury one of a more or less permanent nature, and whether or not Jerry appears tonight will depend upon his own decision regarding his physical fitness at game time.

Bud Jarvis and Archie Briden, speedy rookies, will fill the breach should Lowrey elect to remain idle.

Lester Patrick, pilot of the Rangers, and Frederickson, new skipper of the Bucs, were mates from 1920 to 1925 when Patrick managed the Victoria Club of the Pacific Coast League and the present Pittsburgh player-manager was his star center. They worked together to get the most out of the new forward pass rule, now in vogue in the National League, when it was introduced in the Coast loop, and it is only reasonable to expect that there will be a strong similarity between the attack and defense systems of tonight's rivals.

CHING JOHNSON BACK

The return of Ching Johnson to the lineup makes the Rangers much stronger than they were last year. Ching, generally regarded as the best defense man in the business, was out practically all of last season with a fractured ankle, but he now is back in harness and back in his customary brilliant form. Patrick's starting front line of Bun and Bill Cook, brothers, and Frank Boucher, is one of the fastest, best known and most accomplished forward trios in the ice sport.

In six meetings with Patrick's men last season the Pirates won none, tied two and lost four.

DEMPSEY-RYAN BOUT RULED NO CONTEST

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

For the first time in years, a main bout in Pittsburgh was stopped and declared "no contest" when Referee Joe Keally halted the scheduled 10-round feature event at the Moose Temple last night in the fourth round and shooed the contestants out of the ring. They were Johnny Ryan (formerly Johnny Urban), of Lawrenceville, and Young Jack Dempsey (Tiny DeBolt), of Conneaut, O.

It was the first heavyweight windup ever put on at the Moose Club by Promoter Francis Flynn and was a typical bout between big fellows in that the action was slow. The crowd was divided about the necessity for the referee's action and for a time there was considerable agitation. Jack Burke, brother and chief second of Ryan, in the absence of James (Red) Mason, Johnny's new manager, who was kept out of the corner because of a suspension, became embroiled in an argument with Keally immediately after the bout was stopped and they almost came to blows, Ryan himself stepping between them just as police arrived on the scene and cleared the stage.

BOXERS GET PURSES

Boxing Commissioner Havey J. Boyle, who was on hand, ordered that the boxers be paid their purses. He put it down as a bad match and let it go at that.

Ryan almost knocked out Dempsey with the first punch of the fight, a straight right that connected and sent Dempsey down for no count in Ryan's corner. Thereafter during the entire opening round Dempsey took it on the run, showing great respect for the local man, who was trying to

HANDICAP TURF TITLE AT STAKE AT BOWIE

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—The handicap championship of American turf swayed in balance today as 20 classy thoroughbreds awaited the running of the $30,000 added Southern Maryland Handicap over the picturesque mile and sixteenth Bowie course.

With the possible exception of the Hawthorne Gold Cup, the greatest field of older horses to face the barrier this year will answer the bugle call for the rich event. The best of the 3-year-olds in training have been named to battle with the older veterans of the turf for the pot of gold.

Sun Beau, generally acclaimed the ranking handicap horse of the year, will pack the top weight of 127 pounds, five more than has been allotted to Victorian, which is staging a comeback for the Warm stable.

Misstep, the pride of the Middle-West, gets in with one pound less while Petee-Wrack, the fourth of the quartet of high weights shipped to Bowie principally for the Southern Maryland, battles for the purse with 122 pounds in the saddle.

Bateau, the giant daughter of Man O'War, will be the principal contender of her sex present and she is well treated with 113 pounds.

105 yards for a touchdown in one game this year...which, you will have to admit, is a honey of a run. Your honey or my honey.

On the line, the Indians are braced by a trio of star linemen. Eugene Fritz, a 190-pound tackle, who has won previous all-America mention; Jim Grant, 180-pound end, and Dave Ward, a 190-pound baby who plays a guard will afford the dashing Dukes some busy moments.

As is usually the case when a team comes here, or anywhere else, with a star like Weller, he is always injured and is seldom, if ever, scheduled to start. That is the situation as it exists with Weller today, although I have a hunch we will see more or less of Little Rabbit before the shades of eventide fall and the spectators slowly freeze to death.

TAKING NO CHANCES

Coach Layden of the locals does not figure on taking a chance with his shock troops and will start his regulars, at least on the line. Murphy and Pratt will be at the ends, paired off with Skender and Kemp at the tackles. Clark and Babe Kelleher are to draw the guard assignments and either Lally or Silverstein will be at center.

The likely starting backfield will be composed of McCarthy, Donnelli, Benedict and Kovalcheck. A second set of backs will be made up of Christina, DiVinney, Burns and Trambley.

Given a hard and dry field, with two teams that both favor an open attack, the spectators may look for no few thrills. The aerial attack of the Dukes is expected to cause Haskell no end of trouble.

Dick Harlow's unbeaten and untied Western Marylanders meet the Red Flash of St. Francis at Altoona in the section's second most important game. Western Maryland is favored to beat the Saints.

At Beaver Falls, Westminster and Geneva tangle in their annual battle, with little at stake other than the joy and contentment that comes from trimmin' each other. Westminster is a slight favorite.

WESLEYAN IN EAST

West Virginia Wesleyan is in the east for a game with the Navy and will have to battle the Middies minus the services of three members of its crack backfield, Batchel, Captain Miller and the versatile Kelly Rodriguez. These three are seniors, and are barred from competing against the Navy by the three-year rule in force at the Naval Academy.

Allegheny and St. Vincents' wind up their seasons today, clashing at Latrobe. The Bearcats (St. Vincent's) may take Allegheny—you never can tell, and probably wouldn't if you could.

Davis-Elkins is in Buffalo, ready to continue its march toward an undefeated season by busting Canisus all over the lot. Slippery Rock plays Clarion at Clarion, thereby completing the Tri-State district program for the day.

GRID TILT ON RADIO

Columbus, the capital city of the Buckeye state, will entertain the University of Illinois students this afternoon, the occasion being the annual Ohio State vs. University of Illinois football game. This is one of the many important college football games broadcast through Radio Station KDKA, linked with the National Broadcasting System this season. The opening announcement preceding the game will be made over Station KDKA at 1:45 o'clock. This announcement will inform the listeners the names of the students from the two Universities who will be on the field at the kick-off which will follow in about 15 minutes.

Pitt, Colgate Councils Will Meet Monday

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 23.—(AP.)—The athletic councils of Colgate and Pittsburgh Universities will hold special meetings next Monday to decide whether they will accept the invitation for a football game in New York December 7 for the New York American Milk Fund.

This was made known here last night when William A. Reid, graduate manager of athletics at Colgate, said that the faculty representatives headed by President Cutten would meet at that time. Pittsburgh's board is scheduled to hold its session Monday morning. Unofficial opinion here is favorably inclined toward the proposal.

ALUMNI TO DINE

The eighth annual dinner and get-together of local graduates of Stanford and California Universities will be held this evening at the Schenley Hotel.

SOUTH HILLS BEATEN BY 15-0 SCORE

The Bellefielders, of Schenley High School, have regained the city scholastic grid championship. Playing a valiant game in the Stadium yesterday, the Oakland boys shut out South Hills High, 15 to 0. The skill of 130-pound Jackie Powell, Schenley field general, had much to do with the triumph.

On the attack Powell had things his own way on several occasions, with the result he scored a touchdown after a 41-yard run and lost a chance to score after a 50-yard march when the ball was awarded to the Tunnelites for Schenley's holding.

SCHENLEY SUPERIOR

Although both teams had three first downs in the first quarter, Schenley played the superior role, and the Bellefielders played so well as the game progressed that at its finish they had rolled up 16 first downs to four for South Hills. Mihm and Douglas assisted Powell in the good work.

Versatile Dick Jones and Butts Regan were the outstanding players for the losers.

Powell drew first blood in the second period when he kicked a placement field goal from the 15-yard line. Mihm scored Schenley's first touchdown shortly after. No scoring was marked in the third quarter, but in the final, Powell got away to his 41-yard run for touchdown.

DORMONT WINS

Dormont High blanked Mt. Lebanon High in their big district game, 12 to 0, yesterday in a rather spectacular contest. Wheeler ran 60 yards for a touchdown in the second period when Blair received a 40-yard pass in the third quarter for the last of the scoring.

Carnegie High tripped Crafton, 7 to 0, when H. Bales recovered a fumble and ran 22 yards to a touchdown.

GRID FORTUNE FICKLE, STAR TEAMS FIND

By HOWARD HARPSTER,

All-America Quarterback at Carnegie Tech, 1928, (Written Exclusively for Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

With the majority of college football teams playing their final games either today or Thanksgiving Day, the 1929 football season is rapidly drawing to a close and has proved again that the great American sport travels a bumpy road of ups and downs.

Howard Harpster.

Was it not just last season that Georgia Tech returned home from an invasion of California with the mythical championship of America securely fastened to its colors? And didn't Knute Rockne's famous fighting Irish go through the most disastrous season that a Notre Dame team has gone through in years?

These are only two of the many teams which have made a definitely different showing in the two seasons, last year and this. Some of the teams have risen to new heights, while others have fallen to deeper depths than anyone could have believed possible.

FORTUNES CHANGE

Last season, Georgia Tech was undefeated and untied, and the Golden Tornado was acclaimed champion of America. The Southerners reached heights that few teams have attained in recent years. But this season the same school, with the same coach and practically the same schedule, has dropped far into the depths of defeat. The Southerners have lost to North Carolina, Tulane, Notre Dame, Vanderbilt and Alabama.

Notre Dame, on the other hand, lost to Wisconsin, Georgia Tech, Carnegie Tech and Southern California in 1928, only to come back strong this fall. As a result, the Irish rank with the University of Pittsburgh as the outstanding team of the country.

The differences in their showings certainly can not be attributed to the coaches, for each was led this year by the same tutor who directed it last season. As both teams played practically the same schedules during the two years it would seem that football teams rise or fall according to the material available. This undoubtedly is true, for it is impossible to make a good football team without having good players for the various positions. Football coaching is similar to playing cards. At cards you must hold the "tickets" before you can play them and in football you must have the players before you can win. The difference lies in the fact that a card player sometimes may bluff and get away with it, but what chance has a gridiron coach of bluffing.

COACH NEEDS MATERIAL

Coaching is a most uncertain profession and one in which the fickle public delights in dictating. If a coach has a winner he is the best in the business, but just let him lose a few games and all of his friends of yesterday are cutting his throat. The public doesn't seem to understand that a coach is just as smart and just as able in coaching a losing team as he is with a winning squad. But what can he do about it if he hasn't the players who are able to carry out his ideas and teachings?

After a game starts all a coach can do is to sit on the bench and hope.

All-America Quarterback, 1928

(Note.—Harpster, as the quarterback of the Carnegie Tech eleven last fall, gained national recognition as one of the most brilliant leaders of all time in the football realm. Experts hailed him as "the player with the mind of a coach." He captained the All-East team that defeated the All-West team in California at the end of the season and was generally picked as captain of the mythical all-America selections.)

THE ball is received by the quarterback, who advances up the center of the field behind interference. Right halfback goes down the left side line slowly and when the defensive men are drawn in the quarterback throws him a lateral pass. Left end and left tackle take the defensive end out of play and center circles back to cut down first man to go back for halfback. After half receives the pass he continues down the sideline.

The two teams were rated better than any other pair of Yale-Harvard rivals since 1921 when Keith Kane's fighting eleven rallied at the finish to nose out Mac Aldrich's fine Yale squad by 10 to 3 on Charley Buell's daring run and George Owen's touchdown.

Susquehanna's 1930 Grid Schedule Set

District League games will hold the attention of the fans this afternoon. Four well-balanced contests are scheduled for this particular loop. The best football in the district is being flashed just now in the circuit, and this should mean big turnouts will watch the various games.

A triple tie for the leadership also adds a little to the playing of the game. Clan Douglas, the Celtics and Union Switch are all bunched at the top of the heap. Clan Douglas meets the Pittsburgh Rovers, and this should be a worth while tilt. Around this time of the season the Rovers start to play football, and, with both clubs adopting the pattern weaving style, good football should be on tap.

Union Switch cannot afford to treat the Lewis club lightly. Manager Jack Thomas has been working the Switch team hard, and the front line is functioning well. McNair and Hennigan can get goals and Fontela is good in the last line of defense. Crafton invades Homewood playgrounds to meet the Pierpoints, and now that the Motors' eleven is out of the West Penn Cup, it can concentrate on the winning of the league trophy.

In the Beaver Valley two games will be played. Sewickley travels to Ambridge. And Midland will meet the Midland entry.

Haskell Squad Pays Visit to Westinghouse

Haskell's bronze-skinned gridiron athletes, in Pittsburgh to do battle with the fast-moving Duquesne eleven, visited the East Pittsburgh works of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company yesterday. There they were greeted by F. R. Kettering, of the educational department, and by two former teammates, now Westinghouse employes.

The two Haskell men, Peter Davis and Glen Tahquette, acted as guides to the football men. Last year Tahquette was an end on the varsity squad and Davis had played with the team before being forced out by injuries.

One of the features of their trip was a giant artificial exerciser which was hooked up to give the braves an indoor workout. Similar to the small electric-motored exercisers which help milady to maintain the proper silhouette, this one was made up of a long leather belt hooked to a 125-horsepower motor.

The Indians arrived at the Westinghouse plant at 11 a. m., submitted to the demands of photographers, then departed on a tour of the works. They were entertained at lunch in the Westinghouse cafeteria after which they departed for a final workout before today's game.

CLARK ACCEPTS PADDY'S JOB

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Sheldon Clark, vice president and general manager of the Sinclair Refining Company, has accepted the presidency of the Chicago Stadium Corporation, succeeding Paddy Harmon, builder of the $7,000,000 sports arena.

Clark, nationally known sportsman, accepted because he said he considered it more or les of a civic duty, and with the provision that he might serve without financial remuneration of any kind.

The new president indicated he would appoint a general manager to assume the actual task of directing the stadium's activities; also that his term of office would be temporary, pending selection of a suitable official to devote his entire time to the athletic and exhibition building.

Clark said he had no intention of severing his present business connections.

WILLOW CLUB VICTOR OVER UNIONTOWN

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The Willow Club mittmen of Jack Metz grabbed off honors and silverware in combat with Al Sand's Uniontown mixers in seven out of nine bouts at the Keystone Athletic Club last evening. The gigantic K. A. C. team trophy, the first of its kind ever offered here for an inter-city session, went to the Lawrenceville organization by a count of 36 points to 28, the margin of victory being even closer in many of the tussles than it was in the general result. All of which leads to the assertion that the contestants were exceedingly well matched in most cases and the consequent performances were such as to evince from the capacity throng much cheering over the action and not a few raucous "birdies" over two or three of the decisions.

FRED ZIVIC COPS

In a special fracas that did not figure in the team scoring, Fritzie Zivic, latest of a lengthy line of pugilistic Zivics, hung up triumph by a narrow margin over Johnny Nagi, Uniontown 106-pounder. Zivic, staging his public ring debut, displayed sign of promise, but likewise exhibited numerous rough edges and no exceptional speed of foot. He boasts a nice wallop from starboard and threatens with his left, but is wide open on the defense, a failing of which his opponent of last night appeared unable to take advantage. The development of the diminutive Fritzie should be interesting to keep track of.

The most interesting affair on the program saw Jimmy Giannatti, Fayette, 135-pound ace, account for Bob McCormick, husky local lad, in four hectic rounds. Giannatti's short, crisp hooks swayed the issue, despite McCormick's aggressiveness. Harold Taylor, flashy Willow southpaw, gleaned success at the expense of Dom Asto, clever visiting 126-pounder. Taylor's menacing left no doubt swayed the minds of the arbiters, but there rose loud dissenting voices in the audience when the winner was announced. A similar demonstration greeted word of the victory of Lee Sampson, home luminary, at 112 pounds, over Sammy Julian. There were those who, not without sound reason, figured that Julian deserved a better fate, though Sampson was the cooler puncher of the pair.

JOHN OCH LOSES

Swift Yelonosky, invading heavy, registered over John Och to cut the second and last notch in the Uniontown stock. Och tired visibly in the final round and frittered away the margin he had built up on cleaner hitting in the early moments.

Bill Simendinger refereed all the engagements, with Harry Little and Mike Connors judging the first two affairs and Chester Phillips substituting for Connors thereafter. Jim Taylor and L. W. Saville functioned as timers and Harry Hainsworth, athletic director of the club, attended to the announcing. Billy Lewis, K. A. C. boxing instructor, supervised the show, which was really one of the best in the history of the downtown institution. The summary:

112-pound class—Lee Sampson, Pittsburgh, defeated Sammy Julian, Uniontown, three rounds.
126-pound class—Harold Taylor, Pittsburgh, defeated Dom Asto, Uniontown, three rounds.
135-pound class—Jimmy Giannatti, Uniontown, defeated Bob McCormick, Pittsburgh, four rounds.
147-pound class—Al Becker, Pittsburgh, defeated Paul Swoboda, Uniontown, three rounds.
160-pound class—Manny Letsch, Pittsburgh, defeated Karl Cesto, Uniontown, three rounds.
175-pound class—Mike Chomyak, Pittsburgh, defeated Alvin Turner, Uniontown, three rounds.

TITLE SCHOOL RACE TODAY

A strong field made up of about 50 of the best harriers in local high schools competed in the annual scholastic championship cross-country race over a two and one-half miles course in Schenley Park which began at 11 o'clock this morning. The race started at the flagstaff in Schenley Park, and finished at the same point.

Carnegie Tech presented a trophy to the school winning the team title, and the harriers finishing first, second and third received medals. The letters of the schools which they represented were awarded to the first 15 to finish.

Pilot Strikes Fan, Is Fined $5,000

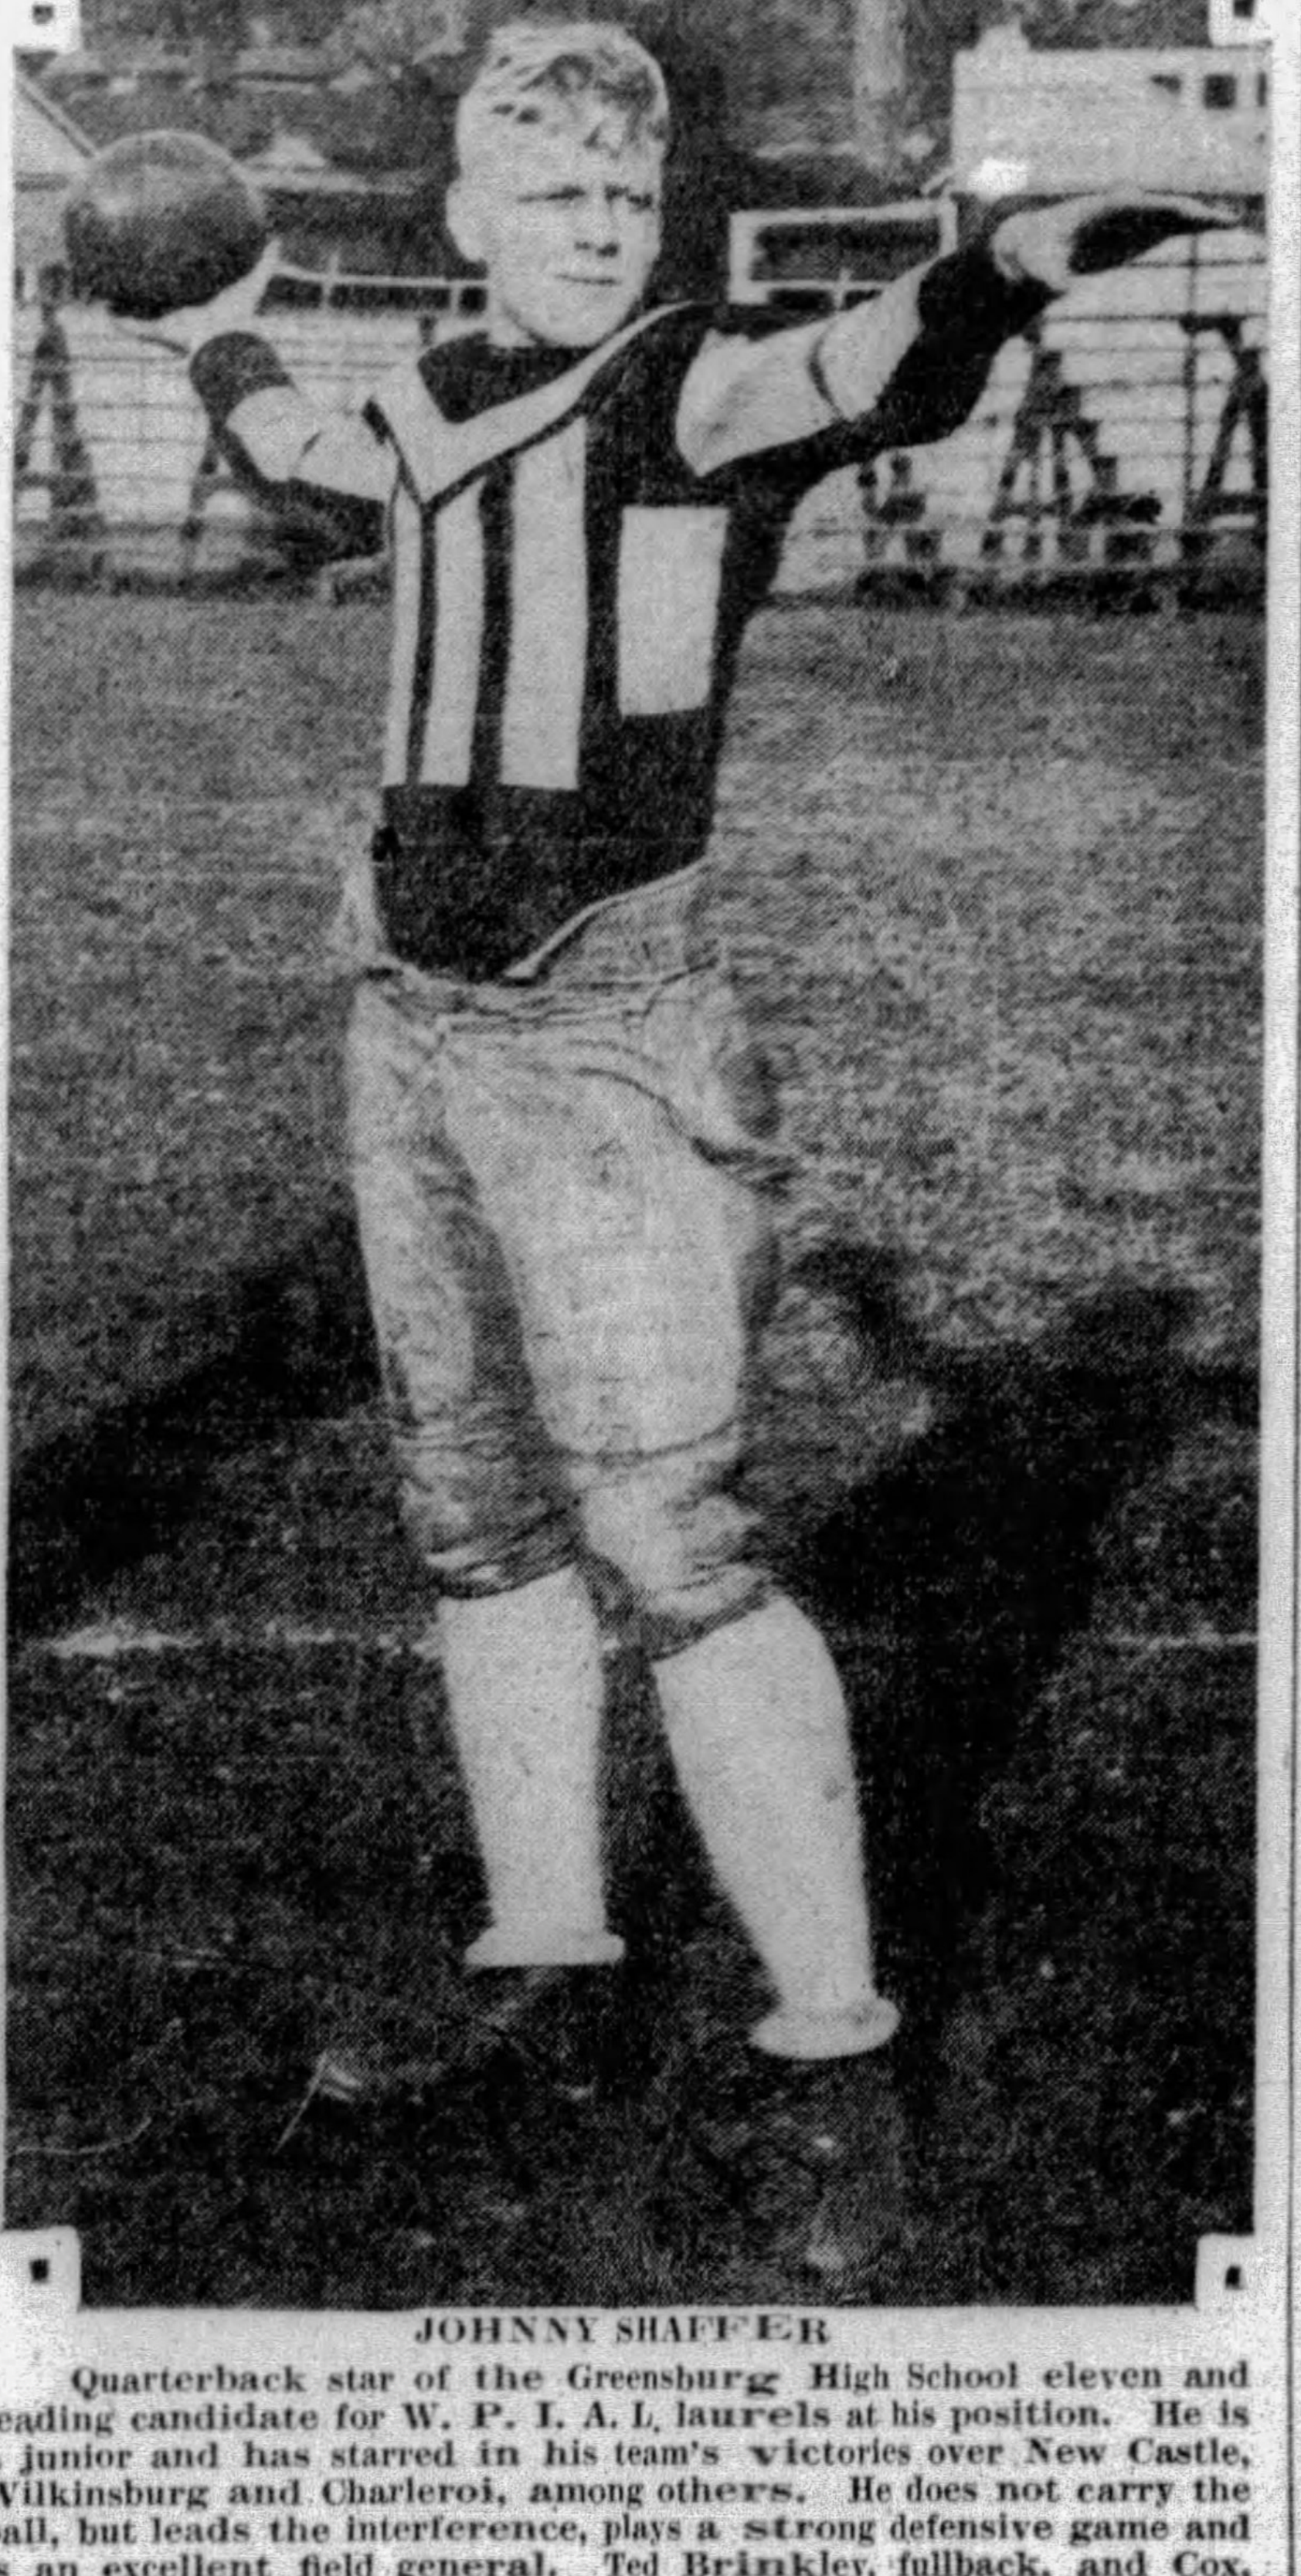
OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Loss of a 17-inning game by the Oakland team of the Coast Baseball League last summer was bad enough, in the opinion of Ivan Howard, Oaks' manager, but it was made more bitter today by a Superior Court verdict that he must pay $5,000 as a result of ill temper during the game.

W. D. McElwain, Oakland oil salesman and baseball fan, sued Howard for $25,000, charging the latter struck him on the jaw after the game. Howard claimed McElwain had been "razzing" him from the stands. McElwain said it was the man next to him. The jury was out one hour.

HOYLES WIN AGAIN

Allegheny Y. W. C. A. bowed to the W. U. Hoyles, 33 to 22, in basketball last night.

SCHOLASTIC STAR



JOHNNY SHAFFER

Quarterback star of the Greensburg High School eleven and leading candidate for W. P. I. A. L. laurels at his position. He is a junior and has starred in his team's victories over New Castle, Wilkinsburg and Charleroi, among others. He does not carry the ball, but leads the interference, plays a strong defensive game and is an excellent field general. Ted Brinkley, fullback, and Cox, tackle, are two other stars of the Greensburgers.

measure him for another clean punch.

In the second round, Dempsey took the lead and outpunched his opponent, who fought from a flat-footed stance and at times appeared extremely awkward.

They lumbered and slugged throughout the third round with honors about even and Ryan had the edge in the fourth round until the referee intervened. Just before stopping the bout, Keally warned Ryan for spinning his opponent about and getting behind him. He had done this several times.

BEATTY, PIAI DRAW

Allen Beatty, of McKeesport, came from behind to defeat Johnny Piai, of Greenville, Pa., in the six-round semi-final, carrying the last four rounds after losing the first two, but the judges disagreed and the referee's decision made it a draw. Judge Brown rightly voted for Beatty and Judge Simco for a draw. Beatty weighed 152½ pounds and Piai 154½.

Nick Polis, of Aliquippa, 162½, bested Chuck Zelnack, of Glassport, 158½, in the second bout, proving too rugged and aggressive for Nick. Nick went down without being hit to take a count of eight in the second round, for which he might have been disqualified, but he wasn't, and he went on to pound out a unanimous victory.

Bus Hardy, of Beaver Falls, dropped Red Hartley, of the North Side, for no count in the first round and outpunched him the remainder of the way, but Hartley took the decision when the judges disagreed. Judge Simco and Referee Keally voted for Hartley and Judge Brown for Hardy.

The crowd was small. Hans Roberts was introduced with the announcement that he would meet a worthy opponent in the main bout next Friday night. Bill Schuster was the announcer.

Between Rounds

Jack Zivic and Tiger Joe Randall wind up their training today for their 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden Monday night. Sammy Paris, of the Hill, has been signed to box Johnny Haggerty, of Lawrenceville, in the second bout, taking the place of Joey Katkish, who is injured and unable to appear.

Frankie LaFay, of Troy, N. Y., who recently defeated Maxie Strub in Erie, boxes Bruce Flowers in New York tonight.

Motor Square Garden still is on the trail of an opponent for Tommy Freeman, of Erie, in its main bout one week from next Monday night.

The Carl Cavelli-Jackie Rodgers return bout will top off the first indoor show of the season at Junction Park, New Brighton, one week from next Monday night. Bus Hardy, of Beaver Falls, and Jackie Coogan, of Canton, O., are in the six-round semi-final and Joe Folins, of Ambridge, and Andy Genet, of Canton, in the first six-rounder. Johnny Morgan will box Billy Holt and Johnny Cangy will oppose Joey Gerze in the two four-rounders.

GIZZY BOXES COLLINS

The complete card for the boxing show at the Coliseum, Washington, Pa., next Monday night, follows: Battling Gizzy vs. Ray Collins, 10 rounds; Harry Spencer vs. Nick Polis, Young Joe Walcott vs. Ted Yarosz and Ross Fields vs. Jimmy Thomas, 6 rounds each, and Young Thomas vs. Joe Clark, 4 rounds.

Johnny Freeman, of Salamanca, N. Y., and Morrie Hicks, of Lackawanna, will box the eight-round main bout of a show at Bradford, Pa., next Wednesday night. Tommy Dacey and Johnny Willis are in the six-round semi-final.

Georgie Peck, of the North Side, wants a return bout with Freddie Edwards, of Huntington, W. Va., who recently stopped him at Wellsville, O. He also is anxious to meet any of the other 145-pounders.

Big Ten Harriers In Titular Races

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Sixty distance runners, the cream of the Western Conference, will run over a five-mile course here today for the team and individual championships of the Big Ten.

Orval Martin, Purdue's great little runner, who holds conference titles at half a mile and one mile, is favored to lead the pack home in the morning race, but Indiana's all-around strength appears most likely to take the team title.

Wisconsin, Ohio State and Illinois will threaten Indiana's supremacy for the five-men totals, but W. C. Clapham, R. M. Leah, P. O. Shafer and C. A. Banke are all veterans of the team which won the title for the Hoosiers last year.

CADDIES DINED

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 23.—Caddies of the New Castle Field Club last night were entertained by the club at an annual dinner. The feature of the banquet was the presentation of the prizes won in the caddies' annual tournament played several weeks ago and of the award of $25 given by President Thomas W. Dickey for the most popular caddie of the season.

CHUCK GELBERT SHOWS REAL PROMISE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Obscured almost totally by the galaxy of fixed satellites of the diamond, Charley Gelbert, the rangy kid who played shortstop for the Cardinals last season, may out-sparkle many of the leading lights ere another season is passed.

Although he took part in 145 games, the son of the former gridiron star at University of Pennsylvania, failed to leave figures to denote a star's heritage. Charley batted only .263 and those whom he did impress appear to have been inarticulate in their praise of the infielder.

Donie Bush was among the baseball men who could see the jewels beneath somewhat rough exterior of the Rochester graduate. It seemed that Charley had some of his real good days against the Pirates and when he is at the top of his form he bears more than a hint of Travis Jackson or Glenn Wright.

STRENGTH AND SPEED

Whatever may have been the reason, Gelbert was just "in there" so far as the public was concerned. As intimated his boosters were few and a diamond star will not get very far without newspaper publicity.

The Redbird shortfielder is a streak on his feet and he tips the beam around 180. Combine these assets with a remarkable arm and you would seem to be on the fair way to a good ball-player. Yet there was something strangely lacking in the young man. At the plate he did not seem to get any power in his punches. Perhaps he is not destined to become a big hitter; nevertheless, he should improve as he goes along.

TO SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Pie Traynor batted only .280 in his first year. Naturally there were many who feared that the Somerville boy would go along in his big-league career as a great third-baseman who could do everything but hit. Harold Joseph was quick to dissipate this suggestion; he has been one of the surest and best stickers in the league over a long stretch.

Gelbert now looks as good as Traynor did at the relative period of development. Pie, however, nursed the spirit that knew no rebuff. It is to be hoped that Gelbert has some of this determination; if he has he should gradually become one of the greatest shortstops of the game.

little class, but it bore out the contention of the fans in this district that no one short of a real champion could beat Willie Davies, the Charleroi mite, who was defeated by the Cuban Negro in an earlier bout in the eliminations.

FRANKIE FREDERICKSON, manager of the Pittsburgh hockey club, is up in arms over what he considers the kidnaping of three players to whom the Pirates have a strong claim, and has asked Benny Leonard to make a formal protest to the National League against the action of other clubs in using the trio. One of them is Wally Kilrea, who starred in the amateur ranks here. Kilrea, offered a Pittsburgh contract last March, is said to have promised that after a vacation trip to Canada he would return and join the Pirates, but it develops that he has been signed by Ottawa, the same club of which his brother, Hec, is a member.

Wally Kilrea.

ANOTHER is Harry Wasnie, a forward with Newark last year. Pittsburgh opened negotiations with him last February and notified the league of its action, but Odie Cleghorn, then manager of the Bucs, induced the local owners to let him finish the season with Newark, which was being managed by his brother, Sprague. The National League has a rule that requires other clubs to keep hands off a player with whom one club is negotiating, and Wasnie's name appeared on the league's last bulletin of this kind, issued on September 4. However, Wasnie has bobbed up with Les Canadiens and is being used as a starting regular on the line.

The third skater claimed by the Pirates is Oliver Redpath, who plays at either forward or defense. Redpath, it is said, told the Pirate management he was working under a one-year non-reserve contract with the Victorias in the Coast League last season, and agreed to come here this season when he would be a free agent. The Victorias, however, have refused to let him go and are still holding him. The Coast League has no connection with the National League, but has asked for an affiliation, and Pittsburgh will oppose the granting of the request until Redpath is turned over to the locals. Frederickson believes that if he can obtain the three protested players, to whose services he insists the Pirates have every legal right, he will have a certain championship contender.

MALONEY, ROCCO, WIN

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight, defeated K. O. Christner, of Akron, with a furious closing drive here last night in the Boston Garden's feature contest. Maloney was behind at the halfway mark, but his solid body punches had the Ohio rubber worker in distress at the close. Maloney scaled 196 pounds and Christner was a pound heavier.

Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, outpointed Marty Gallagher, of Washington, all the way through the bruising 10-round semi-final.

Riccardo Amis, Spanish light heavyweight, waging his first war in America, scored a technical knockout over Joe Judge, of Philadelphia, in the fifth round.

Billy Bruns, rugged Worcester, Mass., light heavyweight, easily won the decision over Howard Bush, of Baltimore, in the opening four-rounder.

HAPPY ATHERTON WINS

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 23.—Happy Atherton, flyweight flash from Indianapolis, again demonstrated his class before a local fight crowd when he outpunched and outboxed Johnny Goodrich, of Toledo, to carry off an easy decision in the 10-round main event here last night.

Billy Edwards, Erie, outpointed Frankie Petrolle, Syracuse, in a great battle over the eight-round route, the bout being the best on the card.

Joe relents a bit at this and Vi then induces him much against his will, to go to the Masquerade Ball, which is to be given on Thanksgiving.

The couple arrive there in the disguise of Romeo and Juliet, but Joe is a complete "flop" as Romeo and takes a definite stand for the entire evening beside the punch bowl. In disgust Vi announces her intention of going home, but on her way out meets Mae, who tries to make her change her mind. Vi is adamant until Mae suggests that they change costumes and give Joe a lesson in gallantry. Joe falls for this and is having a violent flirtation with Vi when she unmasks. The contest is slated to begin Friday. "Authorized East Liberty Merchants" will co-operate in the campaign, awarding one vote for each 10-cent purchase made by a customer. The vote may be cast for any teacher the customer desires.

Over 100 merchants in the district are expected to participate, according to Sig Hahn, chairman of the campaign committee. Prizes and further details of this contest will be announced in an early issue of the Sun-Telegraph.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Mary Patricia Dawn, pert, young, demi-brunette, sees her little brother, Dickie, fail to rise after a dive in the lake. Pat brings up the apparently lifeless body. All hope seems gone when suddenly an airplane sweeps down out of the sky. Pat's father arrives with Guy Elliott, a tall, handsome youth as pilot. Quick action follows and Dickie recovers. Later Elliott kisses and takes Pat for an air ride. Happy days follow, with Pat and Guy in love. Then comes Barbara Bryce with the seductive lure of shadowy eyes. She is the widow of young William Bryce, whose father owns the airplane factory where Guy works. While trying out her new plane, Barbara has an accident but is saved. In the excitement, Guy forgets an appointment with Pat. Later, while airplaning with Guy, Pat has a glimpse of Barbara in another plane. Pat marvels at Barbara's beauty and wonders if Guy is moved by it. Later, Guy receives a visit from Barbara and her young son, upon whom old Bryce squanders a fortune. Tom Burns, a workman, rages about the unfairness of wealth. His invalid son is dying for want of necessities. When Bryce refuses a loan, Burns leaves swearing revenge. The next night, in the factory, Guy hears a stealthy footstep. It is Burns, who has robbed the safe. He is captured by the watchman and arrested. Bryce refuses to intercede for Burns and he is put in prison. In Pat's home preparations are being made for her to enter college. Hearing much gossip about the youth of today, Mrs. Dawn prays that Pat will remain the sweet girl she is. Pat is happy when her dad buys her a new automobile. Bryce delays business, but Guy determines to make good. Pat is terror-stricken when she sees a plane fall. She is relieved when she sees Guy and learns it was not his plane.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVI.

LAURA stood among the delphiniums. They were royal this April, every thrilling blue from the palest azure to the richest indigo. They were bedded there against a background of pink roses—whole masses of climbing pink.

For three years Laura had worked for this contrast of lovely color. Now the garden sang with beauty—all of springtime's happy promise in the song.

Miss Pat stepped blithely down the path.

"Why, mother, if you only knew how girly and poetic you look standing there! As though you were waiting for your lover."

"Pat," said Laura, musing, "do you remember how the garden looked when we came here three years ago?"

"Yes—prim. No dreams. No imagination. You've given the place a soul, mother."

Laura listened absently. Many, many nights in the vanished years she and Richard had planned this home. And how far, far distant, often enough had seemed its realization. Yet more than they asked was now given. She was very happy. This was the twenty-first anniversary of her marriage.

She turned a smiling face to Pat.

"Pull your hat on just a little more."

"It's so devil-may-care perched at this angle, mother dear. With an air of suspense as 'twere. You don't know whether it's going off or coming on."

"Oh, here," said Laura, reaching in her pocket. "Your letters."

Pat took them with a flush and sat herself down on the swinging couch to read. Every Saturday morning and two or three times during the week came this big square white envelope, postmarked Los Angeles. From Lee. He had finished college in December. Half a dozen times already he had driven up for a visit with Pat.

He was a blond young Apollo and humbly adored the audacious Pat.

With each meeting Pat's liking for him grew—a deep, warm affection.

But it had none of the young, radiant fervor that was her passion for Guy.

Now, as she slipped the sheets back in the envelope, Laura sat beside her

"He wants you to marry him, Pat?"

"He would—yes."

"Did you refuse him?"

"Why, mother, do you suppose I'm thinking of such banalties as marriage at the tender age of not quite 20? I've three years more, you know."

"But you were thinking of it, of course."

"And you'd rather have me take Lee? Oh, mother, do you mean to tell me that you don't find Guy the most enchanting thing on the face of the earth? Really, he's quite as thrilling, or more so, than Lee. Why are you against him?"

"They're both very fine young men, of course! But I'm sure I don't see what Guy has that Lee lacks.'

"Oh, yes you do, Mrs. Dawn! Guy has what Richard has—the subtle, mysterious quality—the come-hither, come-hither! And when you were picking a mate for yourself, I notice, you were very careful to land one just crammed full of 'it.'"

"Pat, is that any way for a girl to speak of her father?"

"Why, mother dear," tittered Pat, "don't blame me if you married a man so potent that his own daughter can feel his charm."

"Guy," said Laura, in a way she had of pursuing her own thoughts and blandly discounting interruptions, "has such a long, bitter path."

"But, he's a great engineer, mother, as well as a thrilling pilot."

"And three years from now," went on the mother, "he may be in exactly the same position as he is now."

Pat shrugged:

"Much has happened in 36 months before! If William Bryce doesn't appreciate him, someone else will. And, mother, just fancy hopping across the ocean on a honeymoon. Or circling the globe! Wouldn't you LOVE it?"

"It would be very exhilarating, Pat, to wait on the shores while you took that perilous trip. Exhilarating indeed!"

"But, mother, think of Mrs. Lindbergh—and he was her only son—the only thing she had. But she didn't hold him back."

"No," said Laura, softly, "she didn't hold him back. We cannot hold them back—"

"What you got planned for tonight, Pat?"

"For whom?"

"Well—US, of course! You don't think I gonna be left alone TONIGHT, DO YOU?"

Pat gave him a radiant smile.

"If it meets with your approval I thought we'd go to Noah's for dinner and to a movie afterwards."

"Well, that's all right. Will Guy be alone?"

"You don't mind, do you?"

"Oh, he can come if he wants. But I think it's about time I was getting another ride in the plane."

"I'll speak to him about it."

"But don't let him know I asked you to. Just kind of drop it that I wouldn't mind going."

"I'll be tactful," said Pat, swishing a little sponge wet with liquid powder over her mother's shoulders.

For 21 years her mother and father had been married. Each anniversary they went to dinner, to a theater or dancing. Or, sometimes, they got into the car and drove all the way up to the cottage on the lake. Because there they had spent their honeymoon. These anniversaries seemed precious to them.

As a little girl Pat grew perfectly furious when they left her home. She thought they had no right to be so selfish. As she grew older, she thought it poetic in them. She wondered if it were possible that they still cared with the old glow.

Could it be that now her mother cared for Richard with the fervor she felt for Guy? Felt that beautiful flush and warmth?

"Oh, mother," she murmured dreamily, "your skin is so white. It looks like melted pearls. This is where Dad kisses you. He's cute, isn't he?"

Laura blushed.

Often Pat had seen her father stoop and kiss the nape of Laura's neck. He would come by as she was bending over a bit of sewing, or, sometimes, as she kneeled in the garden planting or spading. He would stoop gaily and kiss that soft curve. Laura turned red as a girl at these caresses.

"Ah—perhaps it CAN last," thought Pat with a happy sigh. "She looks as thrilled as though she were only 20!"

"Come over here, Pat, and pull down my shirt," ordered Richard, yanking at his suspenders. "Now step aside! Are the trousers the right length? I want half an inch of my heel to show and no more."

Richard stepped back from the mirror, gave himself a grin of satisfaction and rubbed powder with a wet finger from his sandy eyebrows.

"How do I look, Pat?"

"Better than you've a right to look!"

"For an old man of 40, eh? Come here. Laura tell you what I bought her? Movie camera—want pictures of myself while I'm still young and gay. Lotta fun!"

He held his chin up while Pat tied the black bow tie. He winked and whispered as she finished. "Which do you love the best—your old man or Guy?"

"You!"

"Liar!" But he went with a swagger to the bed, pulled on his coat and stood for a happy moment surveying himself.

Then he took up Laura's coat, holding it with a great air as though he were the lord of the earth. He whispered something that made Laura blush.

They went out and down the steps with as swift a run as though they were on their first party.

"Just think," said Pat, absently, "they've been married 21 years! A whole lifetime. They don't seem OLD—do they?"

"No," answered he softly. Then he took Pat's arm and rushed her with a laugh across the patio. "Twenty-one years to love, Pat—not too long."

"If we get by as well as they!"

"We shouldn't be so extravagant," said Laura.

"We've builded for 21 years, Lo. For the next 21 we LIVE. Every minute!"

Wednesday the films were developed. Richard sat with his feet in a tub of water while Pat projected them on the little screen. He had a cold and Laura insisted on giving him a mustard footbath.

He made Pat rig up a light and take pictures of him with the mustard wringing tears from his eyes.

She passed her father's study Thursday morning. He had his hat cocked at a rakish angle. "Pat—are these good?" He showed her some advertisements he was just finishing.

"Don't you, mamma? Well, I'm going to stay till one. Nice sunny day—"

At 3 o'clock Pat came home. She was worried, but she would not have admitted it. She had cut two classes, and was now trembling when Laura seemed surprised that she expected her father to be home.

"It's very early."

"He told me he'd be here by one."

"You must have misunderstood."

She drove to the city to her father's office.

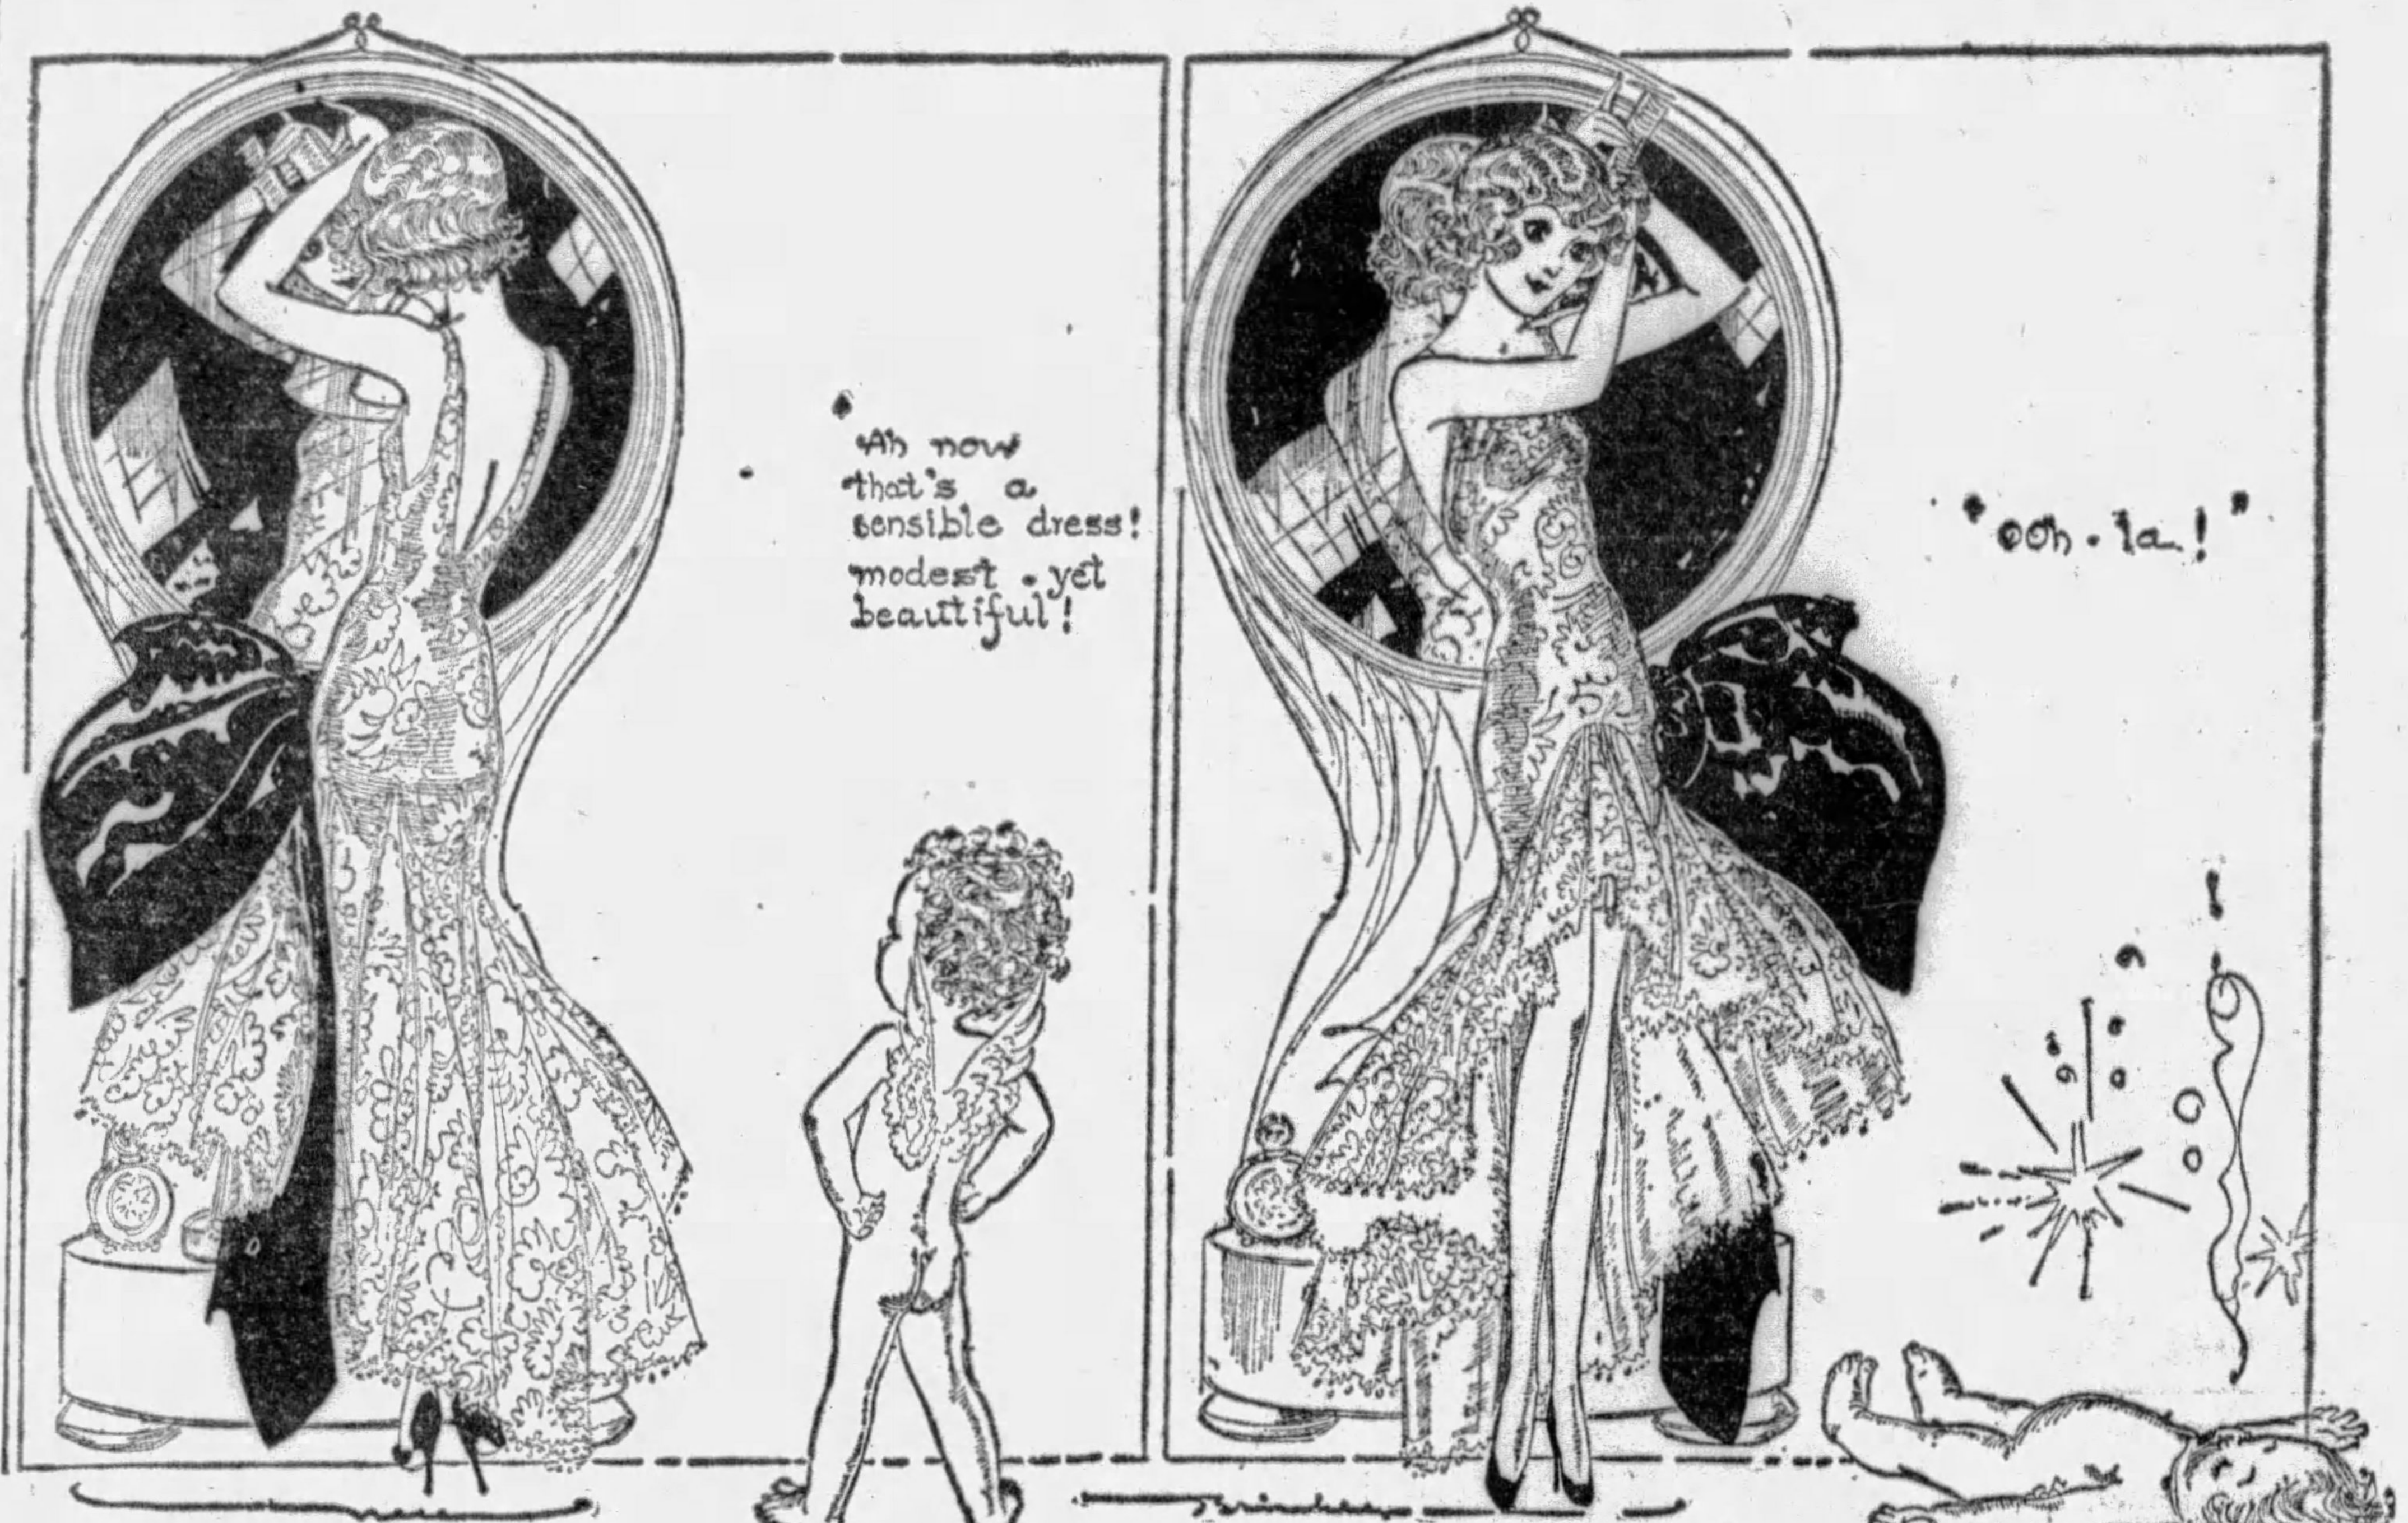
THE HALF-AND-HALF GIRL

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY



"Ah now that's a sensible dress! modest - yet beautiful!"
"Ooh - la!"

CUPID has written a new song—EN-titled, "My Sweet Half-and-Half Girl!" And he's roaming practically all of the civilized world—and you'd be surprised to know, when you think about it, how much of the world is civilized and wears much the same kind clothes—singing it. He'd been reading for some months the fashion Mags, and found out that the dearly-beloved short skirt, that he had likened in his mind to the nympish garb of ancient Greece, was soon to be no more.......or rather MUCH MORE. He sighed and thought to see it immediately upon the next girl he spied upon the street. And he got a shock! For he found that the world wasn't made in a day, you Romance, that many-sided jewel that the world never will cease calling valuable, the heart of the fire.....is..... "mystery!" So he thought to himself, that Love and his "Valuable," Romance, would fare better in this know; that little boys didn't spring suddenly from chubby babies to skinny-legged BOYS; that even bobbed hair was slow coming off or on, and that Fashion, though she tries to jerk one thing off us and put another on us with the speed of a white rabbit's materialization from a magician's top-hat, cannot change us overnight.

At first Ole Dan balked at covering the pretty legs he had come to watch for; then he began to remember that the definition of charm is "mystery;" the sister-word of curiosity is "mystery;" the answer to interest is "mystery." And Cupid opened his mouth and eyes at the idea—long skirts. "I'm all for 'em" says he. "Anything to advance the most important business in the world!" says he.

And then he went out, to call on Gloriette, to see how she looked in the longed-for long skirts. He found her, beautiful, and busy, before her dressing table, all gowned; touching up the high lights of the picture she made. There it was! So that was it. Clear to her dainty high heels, oh, so feminine. "Well—well!" said he. "Ah, now, that's a sensible dress. Modest—yet BEAUTIFUL!"

He couldn't even put on the other "LA."

And that's how Dan came to write his song, "My Sweet Half-and-Half Girl," the other day.

Love's Awakening A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

The Feared Trip to the City Is Made Safely

THE sound of the motorcycle behind us grew louder, and Princess Olina looked at me questioningly. I made mental obiesance of the fact that there was no fear in her clear eyes. But then cowardice was something possessed by no one in either car.

"It's too early for a traffic officer to be out, especially on this lonely road," Philip Veritzen said thoughtfully.

"May I disturb you a second?" Noel rose and knelt between Olina and me, looking through the rear window at the road behind us.

In another second or two the man on the motorcycle, in the uniform of the state troopers, had passed us with but a cursory glance. But as he drew aside the Underwood car he slowed down, as did Harry Underwood, driving it, and after what appeared to be a brief colloquy, he shot ahead, to come back again less than five minutes later, and disappear down the road behind us.

"Mr. Underwood is taking no chances," Noel said, coming back to his seat. "He said he was going to have the road patrolled if he could exercise enough pull. He evidently succeeded."

I sank back into my seat with the comforting assurance that our road would be efficiently patrolled. But aroused many miles farther on, when I noticed a sedan with rear curtains drawn had kept behind us, but at varying distances, from the time we turned into the great Montauk highway.

I had found this out from an occasional and elaborately casual glance through the rear window of the sedan, but I made no comment until Noel asked with apparent carelessness:

"Isn't that a woman driving that car back of us?"

"She's dressed in feminine clothing, anyway," I replied with a smile, hoping that Noel would read between the lines. For I had already noticed uneasily, at a moment when traffic momentarily had forced the sedan close behind us, that the woman in the driver's seat was unusually tall and large.

Noel flashed a questioning, significant glance at me a few seconds later, when his father was answering a question of Princess Olina's and neither was looking at us. I nodded my answer, and from that moment I was conscious that Noel was as intent as I upon the sedan, which I was sure was trailing us.

But a few miles before we reached Patchogue it turned off the main road abruptly and vanished behind the curve of a winding wood road. I sighed with relief and scored myself severely for my fantastic imagination. But a few minutes later another car, an open touring this time, but with curtains up, ostensibly to keep out the wind, appeared behind us, and in the man driving I thought I recognized the features of the woman who had driven the first car.

I made no comment upon this car, nor did Noel, even when it kept behind us through the suburban villages which soon began to replace the country towns. Almost to the end of the double boulevard leading to Queensboro Bridge it maintained its watch upon us, and when at last it swung away from the boulevard into a side street the driver of the roadster drawn up to the curb near the corner set his motor running before the trailing touring car had fairly turned the corner and had slipped into traffic behind us.

Clear to the doors of the Hotel Kelsey came the roadster, and I held my breath for a hectic moment as I saw the small car park a few feet up the street upon the opposite side. Surely the men in it would not dare to attempt any sort of attack in so public and impossible a place.

But neither of the occupants of the small car got out of it. Too far ahead for us to see their faces clearly, they sat still and waited while Lillian, Mary, Prince Georges and Dicky got out of the Underwood car and went into the hotel, and they had not yet stirred when Otto threw the limousine doors open for our party's exit.

I found the chance for a quick pressure of Noel's arm and a whispered injunction to tell Mr. Underwood of the trailing cars. Then Philip Veritzen was gallantly escorting Princess Olina and me into the hotel.

There was a powerfully built, keen faced man standing just outside the doorway, three more of the same type lounging in the lobby. They did not appear to be looking at us at all, but when we had reached our suites and seen still another man in the hall outside our rooms Lillian whispered gleefully:

"Did you pipe the de-tec-a-tives? Between Harry and the hotel they must have papered the place. Well, thank Heaven, they can lay off for a while now, all except the one on watch in the hall. We're sewed in for the winter, we are."

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Love and the Collar-Button

SOMEBODY has suggested that the first step toward the masculine clothes reform should be to throw away the collar-button. The collar-button has been to man what the corset has been to women—the cruelest invention of civilization.

Yet, if parting with the collar-button means parting with the collar, it will be the last blow to romance!

HELEN ROWLAND

If the stiff, linen collar ever goes completely out of fashion, there will have to be a Nineteenth Amendment making marriage compulsory. Nobody except Lord Byron could tempt a girl to marry him if he wore a soft, open collar ALL of the time.

* * *

No woman who has once seen a man's Adam's apple can ever again feel the same blind romance for him.

* * *

A woman may love a man for his weaknesses, for his sins, even for his masterful brutality—but she has to love him in SPITE of his neck!

If love is a lost art in these days, it is probably due to the popularity of the new, soft low collars, which makes Lord Byron and Ben Turpin look almost like cousins.

A woman's neck appears to curve imperceptibly down from her chin to her shoulders; but a man's neck always looks as though it had just been pasted on, as an afterthought.

Clergymen inveigh against the evils and temptations of the modern feminine decollete; but not even a Fundamentalist could find anything alluring about a man with an uncovered Adam's apple.

A wife can recover from the sight of a man's bare feet, or even from the sight of his chin covered with shaving lather; but something goes dead in a bride's heart the first time she sees her husband without a collar.

Put a high, stiff, shining collar on the Missing Link and he could find SOME woman to pet him and call him "My hero!"

Eve may have started all the trouble in the world, but if Adam hadn't been in such a rush to help her, the apple might never have stuck in his throat, and man would never have been condemned to the torment of a starched linen collar.

* * *

When Adam swallowed the apple core, he put the first blight upon love, and sentenced all his sons to eternal punishment!

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

When a Child Is Adopted

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am adopting an infant 1 year old. I have quite a number of friends and relatives in and out of the city. Should I notify them or let them find out for themselves? G. S.

WITH all my heart I advise you to tell or write to these friends and relatives and share with them the great news that you are adopting, or have adopted, a baby. It is a magnificent thing to do, and the glorious fact should be sent to those who are near and dear to you. They will be delighted to hear this news—even as I was, I who do not know you. And they will be so proud, too. Make the words "adopted baby" or "adopted son" or "adopted daughter" so precious and so tender that they will be given a beautiful reverence, a sacred significance. So, dear friend, begin now, by sharing the news with your relatives and friends, to make the word "adopted" a love-compelling one.

Colors for Infants

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Please settle a dispute. A says pink is the color for baby girls and blue is the color for baby boys. B says the opposite. Which is correct?

DISPUTERS.

THIS question has never been definitely settled, but A's statement is the one usually accepted. And don't you think that white is the nicest for both girls and boys?

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Have a Thought for Future Good Health

WHAT a man is depends upon what he gives his body. Of course, it depends, too, on what he does with his body. But that is another story.

DR. COPELAND

In the last analysis, health is made by sunshine, air and food. You cannot hope for vigor and long life without giving thought to these essentials.

Food is the fuel, air the oil and sunshine the electrical equipment of the human machine. An abused automobile will limp along on defective fuel, oil and electrical energy, but for smooth running and certainly for reaching the given destination, the three essentials must be supplied.

Eating is a simple act, but the choice of foods to be eaten is considerable of a problem. It takes knowledge to select them properly.

It is surprising how many men and women thrive in spite of the air they breathe. For a long time they bear without apparent damage what most of us would regard as unbearable air.

In the Black Valley of Ireland, as I have told you, they have no sunshine for four months in the year. The mountains are so high and so closely placed that the sun during this period never reaches this dark place. In sections of the earth the sun is out of sight for half the year.

The inhabitants of those regions live, of course, but, according to our standards, they are not normal. Nobody can be normal without the hope of a little sunshine every day.

Pure food in balanced meals, pure air taken into habitually well-filled lungs and sunshine to vitalize life's processes—in these lie the secret of long life and abounding energy.

Surely there is no need to argue about these things. You know they are true.

But I must ask you: Knowing the vital importance of air, sunshine and food, why do you fail to appropriate to yourself a full measure of their benefits?

You can't cheat nature. You may think she will overlook your neglect. I admit her generosity, but, mark you, there is a limit to her kindness. She may wink at a Thanksgiving feast, an occasional evening in poisoned air and a few days of inside life, but to make a habit of neglect is certain to meet her displeasure.

Every day you observe the simple rules of hygiene is like a visit to the bank. You are storing up energy and resistance against the evil day of possible ill health and accident.

You need not become a "crank," overfussy about your habits. But by establishing a routine of good living you will add years to your expectation of life.

Horoscopes

Sunday, November 24.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of propitious conditions in cultural and social matters, albeit the latter may develop some peculiar or sensational angles. Be careful with funds.

Those whose birthday it is may have a very lively year, with new business and interesting contracts, but speculation and finances are hazardously aspected. Their purely personal relations may be singular or sensational.

A child born on this day may be versatile, studious and popular, but may have many unusual experiences in its purely personal relations.

Monday, November 25.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is not very important in business auguries, but hints of singular and intriguing situations in matters of a personal nature. There may be secret or sinister developments and these may involve an injudicious use of funds or unusual extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of peculiar or intriguing experience, with either subtle or sinister developments in personal affairs. The finances should be prudently handled.

A child born on this day may be clever, but extravagant, personally peculiar and may be given to curious practices or associations in life.

JUDGE EXPLAINS DRY OPINION

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 23.—(INS.)—A misinterpretation resulting from the opinion of Federal Judge Louis Fitzhenry on the Jones law here, which quoted the jurist as ruling that possession of liquor is a felony, stood correction today as a result of a statement issued by him.

In his statement regarding the ruling, Judge Fitzhenry stated that through an error of quotation or through the omission of some word he was reported to have ruled that an individual was a felon if he only knew of another's possession of liquor, provided that he failed to report the knowledge.

Basing his opinion on legislation passed in 1790, the Judge upheld the constitutionality of the Jones law, stating that a citizen was guilty of a felony if he knew that a felony was being committed and failed to make the matter known to authorities.

"Yes, I ruled that a person witnessing a violation of the Jones law without reporting the violation is committing a felony, but I don't remember stating that possession of liquor is a felony," the Judge said in his statement.

2 Workmen Struck By Auto, Driver Held

John J. Rogan, 31, of 1 Wadsworth street, and George W. Gilfoyle, 31, of 2408 Maple avenue employes of the Duquesne Light Company, were injured early today when struck by an automobile at Sixth avenue and William Penn way, where they were working. James Jackson, 21, a Negro, of 5617 Eva street, alleged driver of the machine, was arrested and charged with reckless driving. The injured men were taken to Mercy Hospital, where Rogan was held for observation.

Rockefeller Gives Million to Aid Alien Students

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—(INS.)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has presented the University of Chicago with a gift of over $1,000,000 to be used in building an international club home for the benefit of foreign students studying here, it was learned today.

This latest bequest brings the total contributions of the Rockefellers to the University of Chicago above $46,000,000.

According to the announcement made last night by Frederic Woodward, vice president of the university, Rockefeller's gift may amount to $2,000,000, depending on the final plans of the architects.

NEW EVIDENCE FACES KILLERS

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—(INS.)—Two new insurance policies on the life of William O'Brien came to light today to join the evidence which confronts Howard Dorr, dapper insurance agent, and Mrs. Geneviece O'Brien, the pair who confess that they murdered Mrs. O'Brien's hard working husband to realize an illicit love.

O'Brien held four policies in all, each of them naming his wife as beneficiary.

One policy of $2,500 was written for him by his confessed assassin less than two months after Dorr and Mrs. O'Brien began the unconventional love affair that led to the fatal plot against the woman's husband "just to get him out of the way."

Dorr wrote another $2,500 policy just one week later, investigation showed.

After a coroner's jury held the couple to the grand jury yesterday as equally guilty of the slaying of the woman's husband, they were led back to their cells until Tuesday when the grand jury will take up their cases.

RIVER TERMINAL PLANS READY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 23.—Maj. Gen. Thomas Q. Ashburn, head of the Inland Waterways Corporation, will be in Pittsburgh Wednesday, November 27, to examine river terminal plans which have been practically completed.

The corporation which Ashburn heads operates the Federal Barge Line on the Mississippi and Warrior Rivers. Plans for the Pittsburgh river terminal have been prepared by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang and Charles M. Reppert, chief engineer.

Arrangements for Ashburn's visit were made by Wilmer M. Jacoby, who was here yesterday attending the regular quarterly meeting of the board of advisors of the Inland Waterways Corporation. Jacoby said that he had been requested by Lang and Reppert to invite Ashburn to Pittsburgh.

TOWN ON COAST RAZED BY FIRE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—(INS.)—More than a dozen fires, one of which already has reduced half of Montara to ashes, the others all potentially serious, raged in the San Francisco bay and peninsula areas today.

Swept by a veering and erratic 50 mile gale, the fire which burned over a score of houses in Montara and sent the entire populace fleeing to the open country, late yesterday roared back into the hills. Scaled them, and is now menacing the areas in the hills behind San Mateo, Burlingame and Hillsborough.

Whether the outskirts of the peninsula communities are in actual danger depends entirely upon whether the wind subsides or changes direction, according to those in charge of the desperately battling fire fighters early today.

Red Army Captures 8,000 Chinese in Manchuria

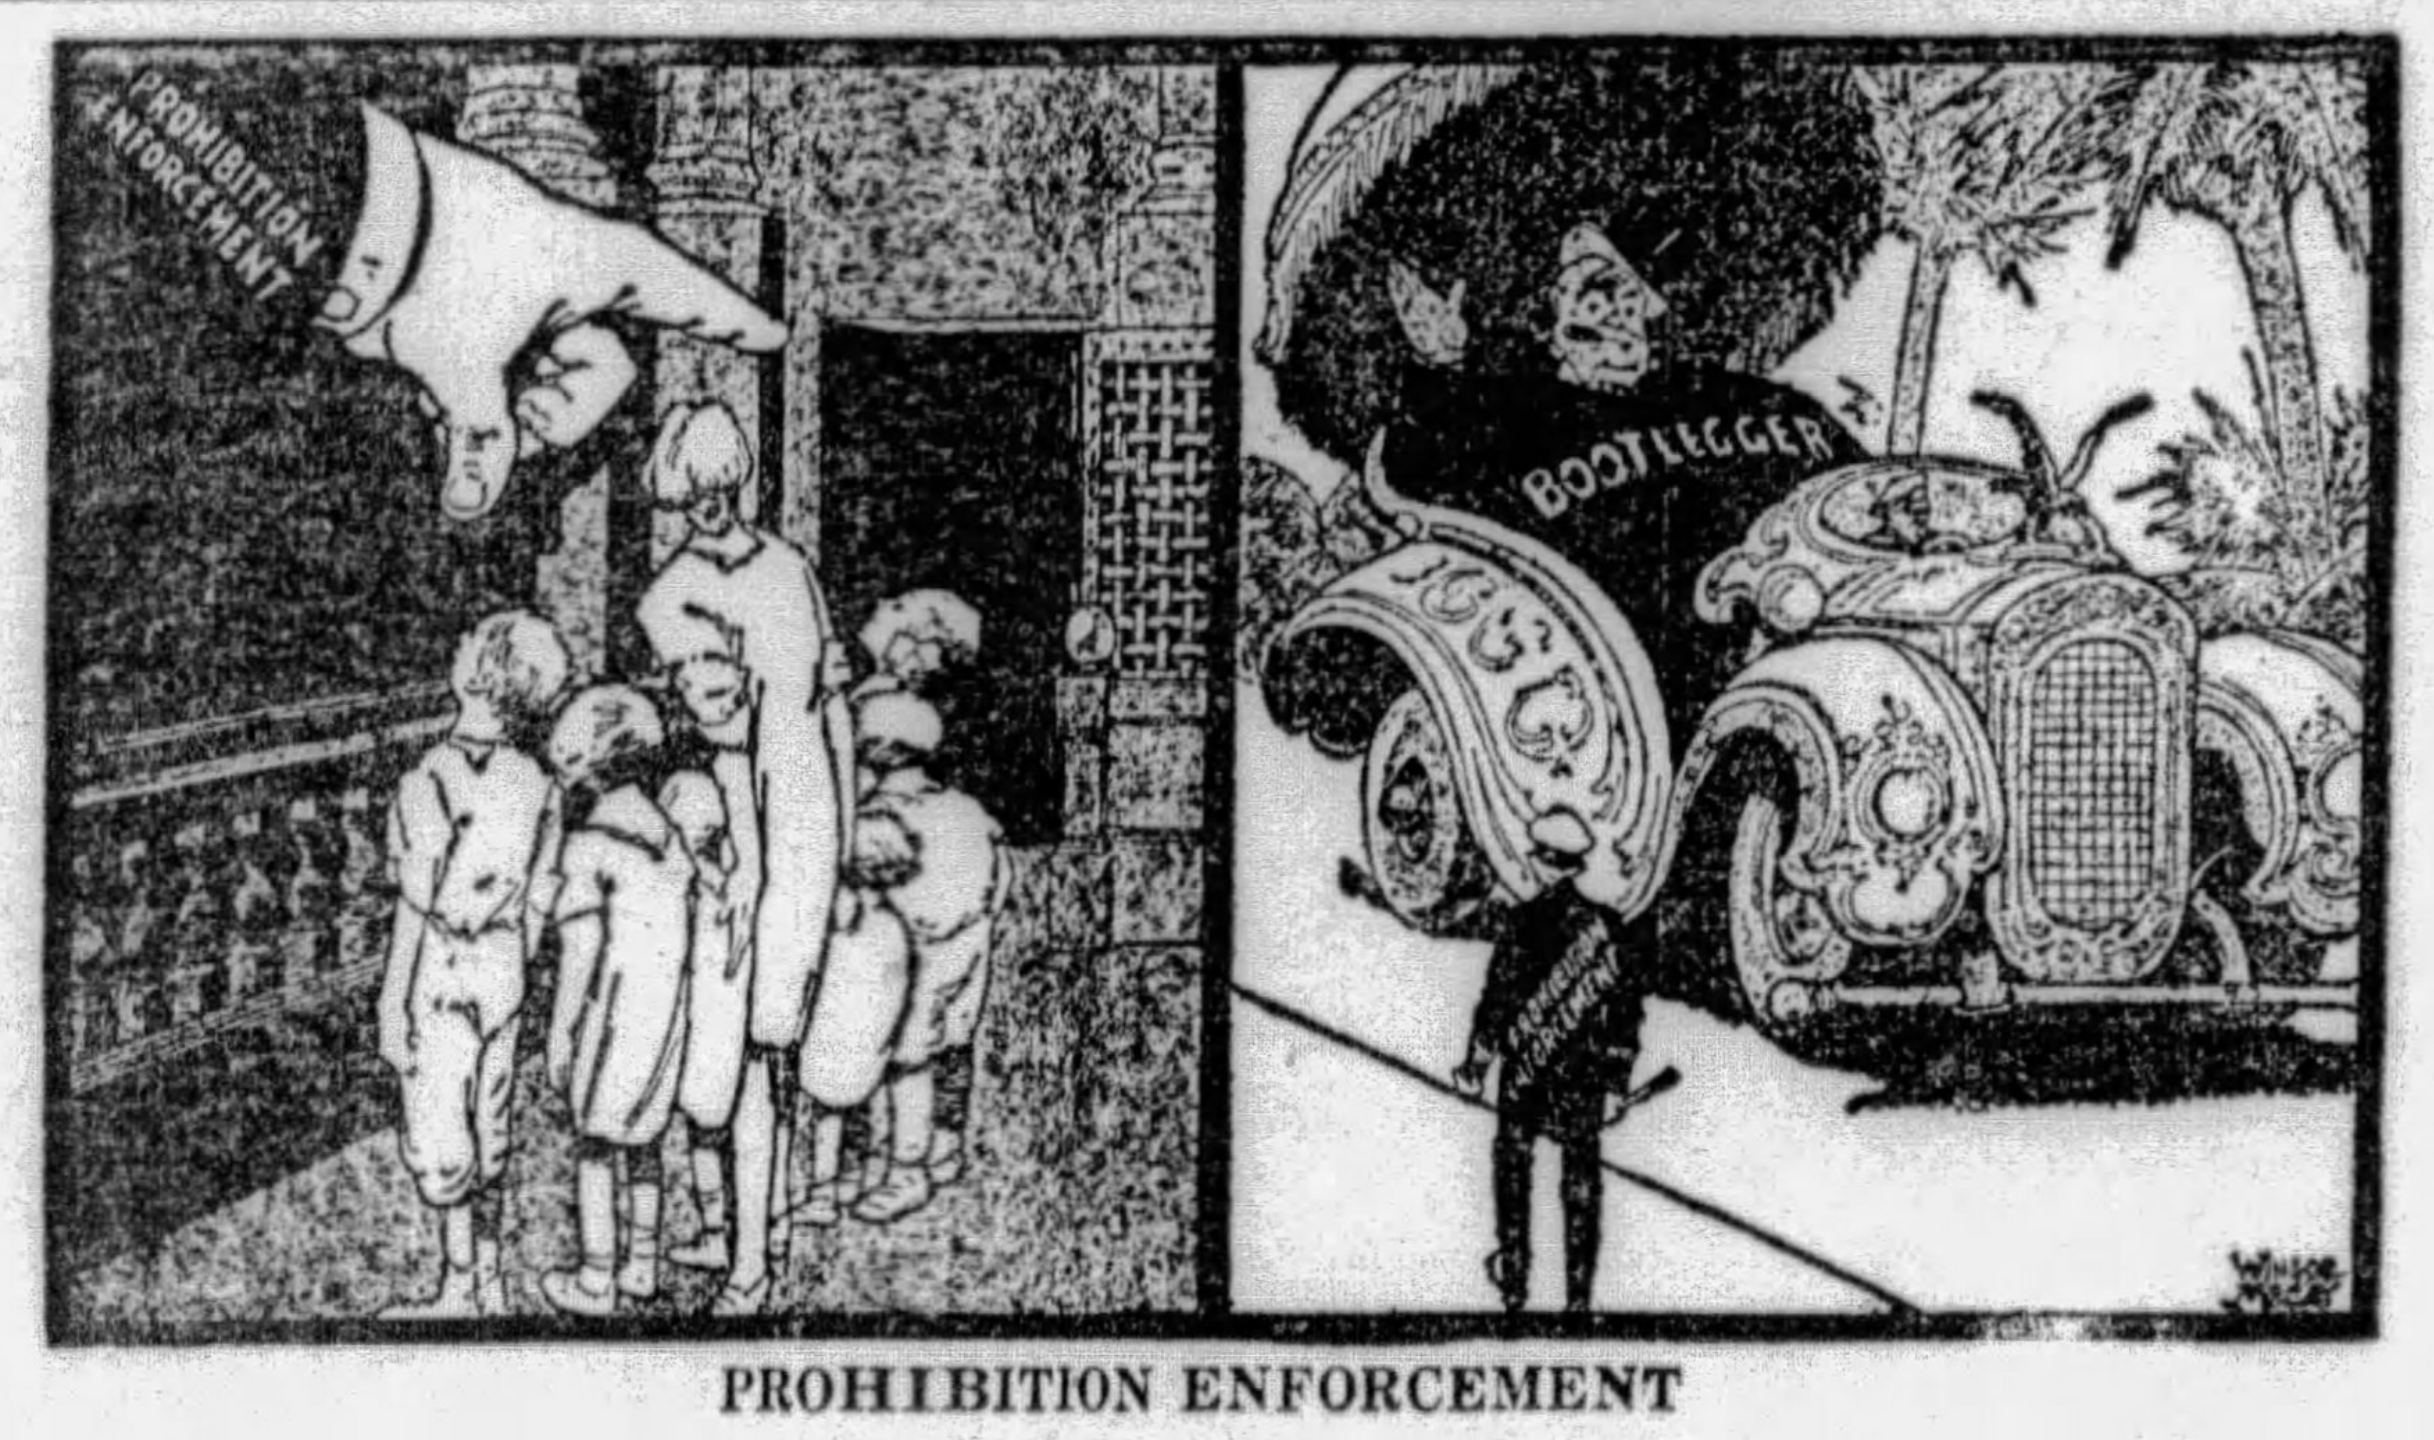
KHABAROVSK, Siberia, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—Tass, official news agency, said today that more than 8,000 Chinese soldiers and 300 officers had been captured and disarmed by Soviet forces in a series of vigorous counter-attacks along the Manchurian front.

About 10,000 rifles, a considerable quantity of field guns, ammunition, and miscellaneous arms and equipment also were taken by the red soldiery.

The Tass announcement said the counter-attacks were directed against continuous provocative assualts by Chinese along the Soviet border in the trans-Baikal and the coastline districts during the past three weeks.

Y.M.C.A. Boys' Work Officers Elected

Other officers were William Thomas, of New Castle, and Tom James, of the Hilltop branch, Pittsburgh, vice presidents, and H. B. Newport, of New Brighton, secretary-treasurer.



PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

WIVES, SCHOOL TEACHERS, PROFESSIONAL WOMEN, DAUGHTERS

Frankly Reveal What They Think of Prohibition

One of the most unusual revelations of the woman's feelings regarding the present day prohibition is contained in TEMPERANCE — or PROHIBITION?—probably the most startling book ever published on the subject.

It has aroused in American women the fighting instinct of the female defending her young—women of all classes from every walk in life have contributed plans in the $25,000 Hearst Nation-Wide Temperance Contest.

What women say and what they know about the evils that exist in the train of prohibition make startling reading.

Read

Temperance— or Prohibition?

By FRANCIS J. TIETSORT

A remarkable book based on the 71,248 plans and statements received by the Hearst $25,000 Temperance Contest.

Fascinating as a novel, accurate as a public document—an unbiased cross section of national thought on the gravest situation facing America since the Civil War.

Voorhis, 101, Pens Supplement to Old Prayer

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(AP.)—John R. Voorhis, grand sachem of Tammany and president of the City Board of Elections, who is in his one hundred first year, has extended a prayer to read:

"Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake, I pray the Lord my soul to take. Should I live for other days, I pray the Lord to guide my ways."

"Most of us live beyond the night we say our prayers," explained Mr. Voorhis, "yet the player taught to me on my mother's knee and to millions of others never took the slightest notice of this."

Quiteso, Quiteso

IF YOU haven't a figure, you're a flop;
If your face is not a knockout, you're a loss;
If your name is printed larger, you're on top;
While you talk about yourself, you get across.

If you fail you'll find the knocking's not so good;
As long as you keep bettering your score,
All the wise guys tell the world they knew you would.

If you talk a little louder than the mob
(And it doesn't make much difference what you say)
You'll get by on any street, with any job,
—CARROLL CARROLL.

OOP!

A FEW weeks ago Al Jolson and Harold Atteridge and others decided to motor from Hollywood to the Canadian border for some good giggle water. "But how will we get back with it?" queried Atteridge.

"Lissen!" thundered Jolson, "Sapolio is a household word, isn't it? Well, the name Al Jolson is a household word in Canada just as it is in America!"

On the way back with the laughing soup, the car was halted at the border by a customs official.

'Just a minute,' chirped the ma-hammy singer, "did you ever hear of Al Jolson?"

"Well," said the customs officer, as he fingered his head and knit his brows, 'I know about where it is—but not exactly."

BY WAY OF VARIETY

Since the Financial Pogrom in Wall Street, those generous hosts whose liquor closets were always well stocked no longer ask: "What'll you have?"

Nowadays it's: 'How'll you have your gin?"

STOP, THIEF!

ACCORDING to Answers (London): " . . . he was a famous actor. He was also very conceited. Every time it thundered he would run to the window and take a bow."

Which was one of the howls in A. Hopkins' "Burlesque" production and which proves that it takes the English over a year to get a joke.

TONGUE IN CHEEK

Perhaps when you have strayed a little ways,
Encountered thorns and stumbled into traps,
You will recall our gay and glamorous days—
Perhaps.

Perhaps when you have found new loves untrue
You will regret your momentary lapse,
And I'll be waiting patiently for you—
Perhaps.

THESE CHARMING PEOPLE

DURING the premiere of a new Ziegfeld show a critic, annoyed by the loud chatter of a prominent society man, leaned over his aisle chair and scolded him for his poor manners. The following Sabbath the Times critic, J. Brooks Atkinson, had this to say:

The conduct of many of the most conspicuous theatergoers is unexceptionable; they take no liberties and assert no special authority. Al Smith, graduate of the Oliver Street lanеers, arrives on time and regards the play as the chief event of the evening. Fannie Hurst, Will Rogers, Owen Davis, Alice Duer Miller have full consideration of their neighbors. So, also, do George Mayer, the interminable first-nighter; Justine Johnston, Walter Wagner, John Farrer, Walter Lippmann, Irving Berlin, Rollin Kirby, Daniel Frohman, Hopep Hapton, Jules Brulatour, Charlie Chaplin. They are the mold of form. One need not whisper to them, as a dramatic critic once whispered to two droning conferees behind him, "They are making so much noise on the stage that I can't hear a word you're saying."

INCIDENTALLY

MISS ALISON SMITH, the assistant play-inspector for the N. Y. World, was also aroused. She has this to say: "They are the rudest (the society crowd) in the world. They are the hardest shovers, the loudest talkers, the most inconsiderate. Compared to them, a prize fight crowd is a model of courtesy and decorum. There is no hushing these people. They are blind and deaf to devastating glances and infuriated shushes. Thus the crushing rebuke of the music lover sitting next to us was utterly lost on its intended victim: 'Where do you think you are?' he inquired mournfully, 'at the opera?' "

OF COURSE!

Katherine Brush's "Young Man in Manhattan," newspaperman serial, in the Saturday Evening Post, contains this on Page 142: " . . . but Toby knew he was back. There had been a line in Winchell's column several days ago. There had been a paragraph yesterday in another column.

First with the news again, huh?

SQUELCH

MAURICE, the parent of all the Barrymores, was irritated for many theatrical seasons by a New York critic, best known for his untidy appearance, who never had a kind word to say or write about the star's acting.

Barrymore finally encountered the aggravating reviewer in the foyer of a theater one night, and said bitterly: "After looking at you, sir I forgive everything!"

Sidney Munden is still of the opinion that the magazine poets are incredibly lacking in invention, as far as similes are concerned, and offers the following evidence: Eugene K. Campbell: Cold as ice . . . Charles J. McGuirk: Gurgled like a happy child . . . Isobel Stone: Smells like a country funeral parlor . . . Susan Maitland: Elusive as a broken spell . . . Angie Ousley Rosser: Old as time . . . Ellsworth Larson: Rising and falling, like flags of lagging light curled and unfurled and purling in the mind . . . Jessie Stanford: Lips like Sir Dan Cupid.

OBSERVATION

No one, probably, has ever paused to think that the chestnut vender on 43rd street, opposite the Paramount Theater, is the only man in Times Square who does his roasting in public.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES
DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles—the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d," to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

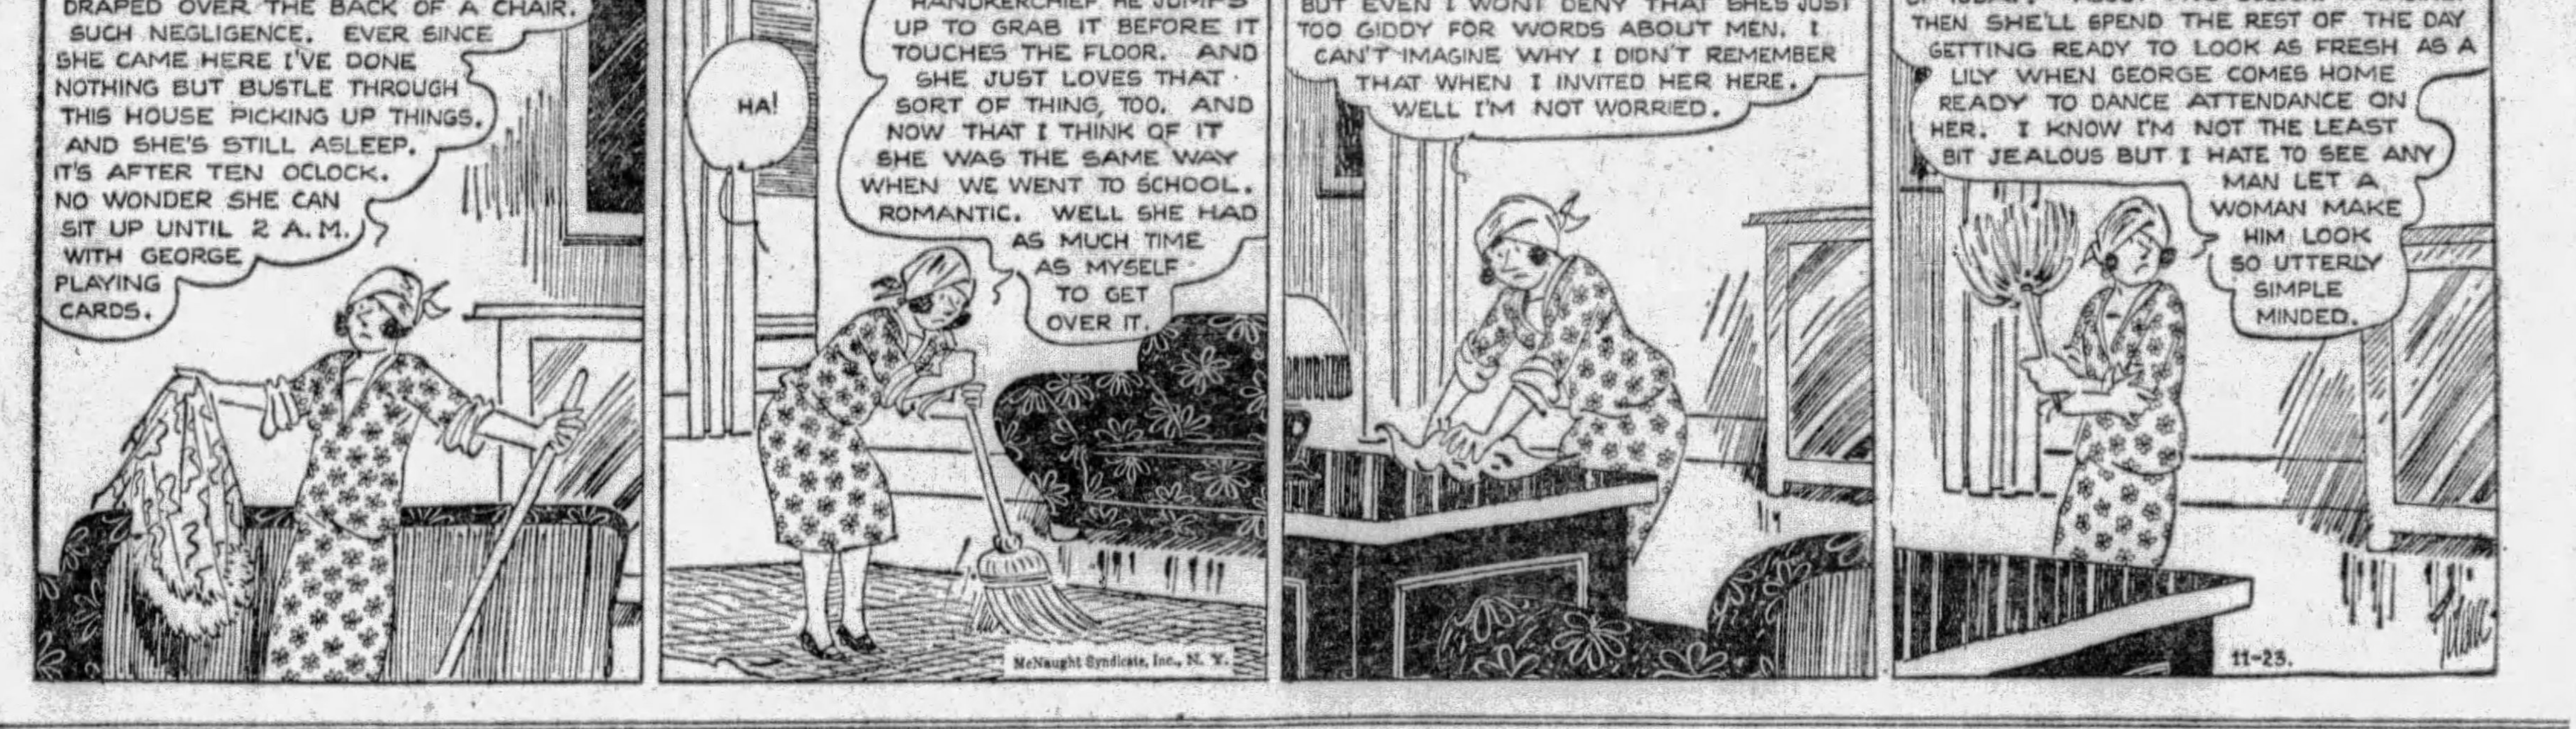
THE BUNGLE FAMILY

George, Beware

By Tuthill



HA, ANOTHER OF FLORENCE'S FROCKS DRAPED OVER THE BACK OF A CHAIR. SUCH NEGLIGENCE. EVER SINCE SHE CAME HERE I'VE DONE NOTHING BUT BUSTLE THROUGH THIS HOUSE PICKING UP THINGS. AND SHE'S STILL ASLEEP. IT'S AFTER TEN OCLOCK. NO WONDER SHE CAN SIT UP UNTIL 2 A. M. WITH GEORGE PLAYING CARDS.
HA!
IF SHE DROPS A HANDKERCHIEF HE JUMPS UP TO GRAB IT BEFORE IT TOUCHES THE FLOOR. AND SHE JUST LOVES THAT SORT OF THING, TOO. AND NOW THAT I THINK OF IT SHE WAS THE SAME WAY WHEN WE WENT TO SCHOOL. ROMANTIC. WELL SHE HAD AS MUCH TIME AS MYSELF TO GET OVER IT.

I'LL ADMIT SHE WAS MY BEST FRIEND BUT EVEN I WONT DENY THAT SHE'S JUST TOO GIDDY FOR WORDS ABOUT MEN. I CAN'T IMAGINE WHY I DIDN'T REMEMBER THAT WHEN I INVITED HER HERE. WELL I'M NOT WORRIED.
I WONDER WHAT TIME SHE'LL GET UP TODAY? ABOUT TWO OCLOCK. IMAGINE! THEN SHE'LL SPEND THE REST OF THE DAY GETTING READY TO LOOK AS FRESH AS A LILY WHEN GEORGE COMES HOME READY TO DANCE ATTENDANCE ON HER. I KNOW I'M NOT THE LEAST BIT JEALOUS BUT I HATE TO SEE ANY MAN LET A WOMAN MAKE HIM LOOK SO UTTERLY SIMPLE MINDED.

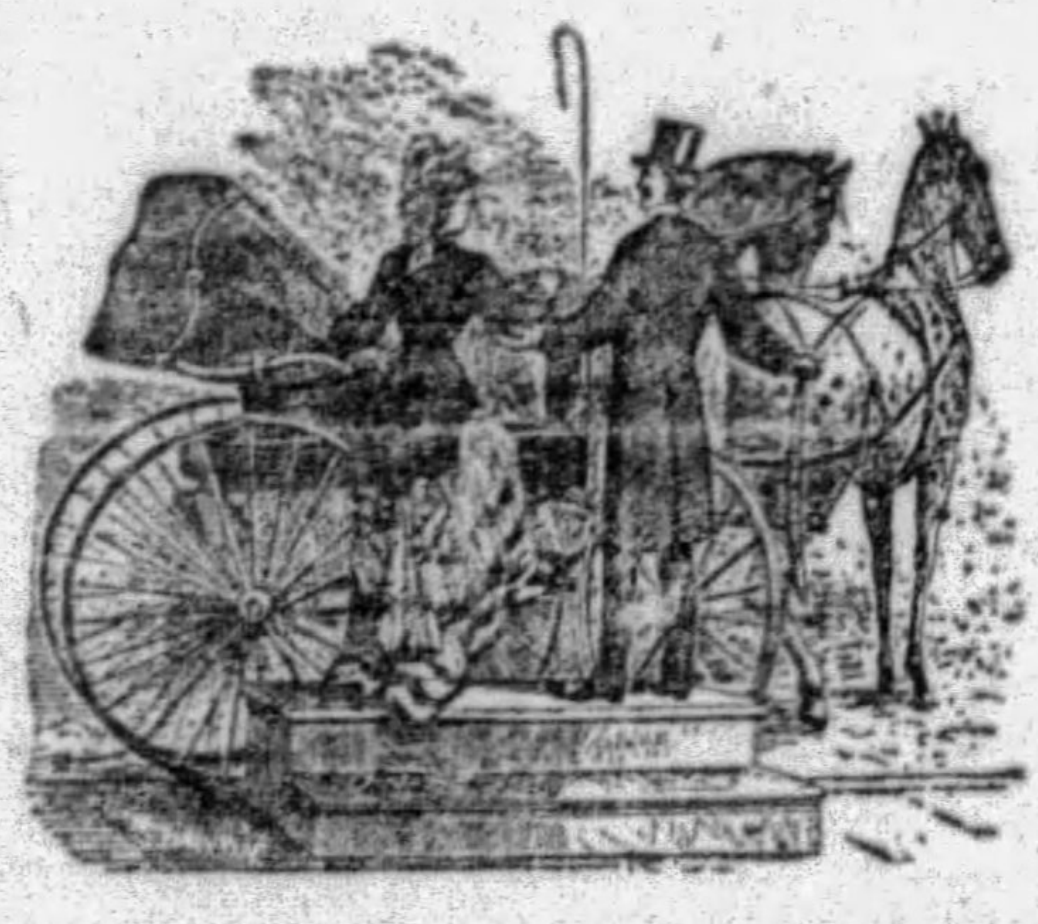
"COLONEL" IS TOO SMART FOR SOCIETY LEADER

NOTE—"Colonel" Dick Maple, the author, is revealing the conversation which took place with Mrs. Bigmout, society leader, in her carriage. She has intimated that he must have "had an affair" with Clara Middle, who has been booted out of society.



WELL, the old "dodo" looked at me as though she thought I ought to be "bored to simples," and remarked, "Colonel, you must be the most innocent man in the world or—"

I said, "or what?"

She remarked in a whisper not intended for me to hear, "Blamed fool."

At this time our carriage was at the door of my hotel, or boarding house. I alighted, and in a very gracious way thanked Mrs. Bigmout, assuring her I had enjoyed the ride hugely, remarking, "I am very much obliged for the generosity," and wound up my remarks by saying I intended to find out the truth about Clara.

But Mrs. Bigmout slammed the carriage door with a slam that as much as said, "Oh, you idiot!" I know very well that this old "aligator" had schemed up that ride to throw mud at Clara and thus interest me in the welfare of her own daughter, Dorothy.

Welfare Fund Increase Shows Goal Is Near

With steady accretions to subscriptions, the Welfare Fund so increases daily the pledged amount that it now nears the goal set when the campaign began. At yesterday's report of the teams engaged in the canvass the total was $795,764, indicating that, at the rate of increase shown daily, the $1,168,055 sought will soon be in hand.

It has been necessary to extend the period of solicitation, not because the people are not responding, but because the physical task of collecting so much money has not been found to be possible in the time originally set. Thousands who gave last year, it is said, have not yet been solicited because canvassers have not had time to visit them. Hence the closing of the campaign has been postponed until next Wednesday night, by which time it is expected all teams will be ready to make complete reports.

Pittsburgh never yet failed to respond when an appeal was made to its generosity, and it will not do so in the present call in behalf of the needy, the ill and the unfortunate.

Plans for New Car Go On, Showing Faith in Times

Announcement that the American Austin Company is going ahead with plans to bring out its automobile early in 1930 is a remedy for pessimism. Officials of the company share the general belief of commercial leaders that stock market operations have not even dented the solid rock of the foundation of general business. They indicate their belief by continuing to push the remodeling of six buildings of the plant acquired at Butler for the manufacture of their car. One is nearly ready for the installation of machinery.

Pessimists have gloomed over reports that the automobile business has fallen off. If it did it would be nothing unusual and only a seasonal symptom. But as a matter of fact, just at this time, the automobile sales record for November in Pittsburgh is nearly 30 per cent greater than it was in the same period a year ago. November sales throughout the country are on a par with last year, and in some places, as in Pittsburgh, there has been an increase.

The activities in Butler are not based on a delusion and it is satisfactory to note that another important plant there, requiring steel and other materials, will soon add to the draft on industry and labor in this district.

War Against Illiteracy Delayed Without Reason

In general, the government at Washington seems capable of organizing and appropriating to meet great national emergencies.

The only emergency they seem incapable of meeting is the emergency of national illiteracy which curses the land.

There is no difficulty in getting Congress to act and authorize ways and means to ward off suffering or peril from Mississippi floods, boll weevils, Johnson grass, foot and mouth disease, tobacco worms, cinch bugs and hog cholera.

We SHOULD meet and overcome those great or small threats to our happiness, our prosperity and our national safety.

But it is also important and even ominous that six out of every 100 adults in our population cannot read or write in any language, and that this is the highest percentage of illiteracy of any civilized nation on the globe.

It is still more important and ominous that the government is NOT DOING ANYTHING ABOUT IT.

That is, it is doing nothing but accept from Julius Rosenwald, head of Sears-Roebuck, a generous gift of $100,000 to finance for a year the expenses of a private committee appointed last spring by Secretary of the Interior Wilbur to investigate and report what, if anything, the federal government should do about this matter.

Why do we need to wait a year for another committee to report?

What more information does the administration need, if it intends ever to act?

The Census Bureau gives us shocking figures of national illiteracy and tells us we lead the whole world in tolerating and fostering ignorance.

The Army records tell us that in the last war 25 per cent of our young draft soldiers between 21 and 31 were so ignorant as to be unfit for military service.

The courts and the crime commissions tell us that three out of every four criminals come from the ranks of the illiterate.

Students of government tell us that political corruption might perhaps be stamped out if we could get rid of its chief cause: The hordes of illiterate citizens herded to the polls, unfortunates inaccessible to enlightenment and incapable of intelligent voting.

Are we too poor to do anything about it?

Oh, no. The secretary of the treasury tells us that we surpass all nations in national wealth, national income, governmental tax receipts, and that the Treasury is so full of money that Congress can give us a $160,000,000 tax reduction.

Don't we know what to do?

Oh, yes. The National Education Association, the National Organization of School Superintendents and every other leading group of educational experts unite in urging what measures the federal government should take.

They recommend a new Department of Education, headed by a secretary of education, with a seat in the cabinet. They want this department empowered to aid the states in their education activities.

Secretary Wilbur, who has publicly declared against a separate Department of Education, is naturally in favor of an investigating committee spending a year of time and Mr. Rosenwald's $100,000 in investigating what everybody already knows.

An investigating committee is a well understood political maneuver for postponing action.

But the people do not want action postponed on a measure so vital to their welfare.

The Republican party is not going to have an easy time at the next election unless it does less for the privileged interests and more for the general public.

A Department of Education is provided by the Capper bill now before the Senate.

Why does not the Republican President favor this measure and the Republican Congress pass the Capper bill and create the long delayed Department of Education?

SECRETARY ANDY MELLON reduces the income tax. That's good news if you have an income.

"Bugs" Baer

League of Nations refuses Mr. Hoover's offer of foodships. They're afraid one of them might reach Wall street.

Last year we were optimistic as a corn doctor during the Victorian era. Now, we are breathing on mirrors to see if we are still alive.

We haven't felt humanized since the panic joined us. If Mr. Hoover ever gets that foodship idea over, we want the job of head taster.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., offered to buy a million shares of Standard Oil at 50. But he's only 48 now.

Grabbing on margin is as healthy as clinging to a buttered cornice.

Centuries ago, Omar wanted to know about the inverted bowl people called the ticker. We have been a ticker tape worm for six months.

We cannot yet understand how they got such bad news on such a narrow piece of paper.

However, we are through speculating. From now on we stick to hoss racing, dice and contract bridge.

Who got the gravy? They say a man up in Boston made five million selling short. We don't even know what that means. All we know is that the government is changing the glue on postage stamps because the old flavor was getting to be habit-forming.

Morgan and Rockefeller now own all the stock certificates. Twenty million people were in Wall street. It was the biggest blindfold test ever made on a borrowed cigaret.

This is a very prosperous nation if you have anything to prove it. But we ain't even interested in the book value of Carnegie Library.

Well, we're off again to a new start like an old shirt that has left its buttons in the mangler. We have our health, the Rocky Mountains and the Great Lakes. And the hoss-car lines still have their charters.

THE BEAR-HUNTING SEASON

By Herbert Kaufman

THE bear-hunting season is in FULL swing. Out in the Yellowstone, park authorities have mounted choicely-baited sections of big iron pipe on automobile trucks, and are luring troublesome bruins into the traps.

Too many grizzly play-boys have been breaking into camps and raiding hotel pantries, thereby invoking federal attention and banishment from the bacon-rind pastures.

Uncle Sam is also collecting big guns in Washington to halt BEAR SENTIMENT, which for the past month has upset prosperity's juiciest apple carts, and tended to devastate general confidence.

President Hoover's campaign against pernicious pessimism opens up with a billion dollar railroad development boom, the echoes of which, ringing 'round the world, begin to dissipate market gloom and bring frightened ticker quotations, grain prices and bond bids out of cyclone cellars, where they have shivered and cowered and over-nursed their wounds.

TRAFFIC experts, scanning balance sheets and horizons, decide to proceed with budgeted improvements and assure steel plants and equipment concerns of contracts which will keep blast furnaces, rail mills, locomotive factories and car shops on full-time schedules.

Nineteen hundred and thirty will find highway extension, flood control and reclamation projects painting rainbows across the continent—absorbing employment slacks and encouraging private enterprise also to resume its onward march.

The prodigious sums lately bootlegging in the call money market are scurrying back to their old jobs at the bank, sadder and wiser for recent joyrides.

FABRICATORS and retailers may now secure requisite accommodations at customary interest rates, instead of competing with mirage chasing gamblers for operating capital.

Usury's mad fling is over. And America's reserves are again ready to serve mainstay customers for REASONABLE hire.

The outlook for bumper crops of skyscrapers, freight and passenger cars and concrete roads was never fairer, even IF automobile sales have slightly declined and the demand for ermine pajamas and emerald garter buckles has suddenly abated.

Diamond cutters AREN'T busy, but stone cutters are chipping away as USUAL.

A million houses of cards have collapsed, but the towers of Manhattan AND Chicago AND Detroit keep rising.

Gov. Smith's new Waldorf-Astoria Company decides to top the Chrysler Building by 100 feet, thereby rousing a cheer from the tombs of John W. Gates and sundry other plungers who made Thirty-fourth street and Fifth avenue world-famous for high play.

But John W. Gates NEVER sold tomorrow short, nor entered any game without sufficient CHIPS to back his opinion of a card or a condition.

Consequently, his estate STILL pays super income taxes, while the Armour fortune, already a by-word when Gates was peddling barb wire, can't manage to pay its DEBTS.

Rumor, which never bothers to learn the facts of the case, delights to credit his winnings to BULL LUCK, but investigation traces them to BULL WISDOM. He understood WHEN to cash in.

He wasn't a PROFIT HOG—and so he died on velvet.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD! ∴

By Elsie Robinson

MRS. JAKE ELLIOT has just had to take her 16-year-old boy, Eddie, out of Hi. She was in to see me yesterday and told me about it . . . sobbing in that helpless way of hers.

"I'm just about heartbroken," she cried. "He's the brightest of my five. I thought it was awful when Jake wouldn't let Nelly and Jim go through but they weren't really what you'd call scholars. They didn't seem to mind going to work so much. But Eddie's just about crazy. He'd set his heart on being a lawyer and you know a boy just has to have an education for that. N' how much education can he get, leaving school like this to work in a garage?

"It isn't as if 'twas really necessary either. We have money enough, by managing, to put him through. But you know Jake . . . I've talked and talked to him but it doesn't do a bit of good. He's a self made man and he's got no use for school education, he says. He says if a boy's worth his salt he'll get out and work when he's sixteen. And, of course, there's nothing for me to do . . . a wife's got to stick by her husband. But it's always hard on a good mother to see her boy's life spoiled like that."

That's Mrs. Elliott's story. It's a sincere story. She really believes that she's a good mother and that she can't do any more than she has to help her boy. She is doing exactly what she saw mothers do when she was a girl . . . what she was taught good wives and mothers should do.

"KNUCKLING DOWN" . . . TAKING WHATEVER SORT OF A DEAL WAS HANDED THEM AND THEIR CHILDREN . . . MEEKNESS, PATIENCE, SUBMISSION TO ALL MALE DOMINANCE . . . such was the wifely and motherly virtues when Mrs. Elliott was young. She thinks they're virtues yet. THEY'RE NOT!

Poor little Mrs. Elliott with her helpless sobbing might have passed as a good mother in 1829, but she rates as a bad and cowardly mother in 1929.

Good motherhood doesn't mean "knuckling down" any more. It means standing on your hind legs and acting human. It means knowing your job and putting it across with a bang. It means putting up an awful scrap to defend your children if necessary.

It isn't often necessary any more, thank goodness. The average American father is as generous as he possibly can be with his child and is ambitious for him. But there are thousands of fathers who still have not caught the American idea . . . and thousands of spineless mothers who feel that what "papa says" is law.

But society doesn't applaud such means any more. Meekness, that subjected her children to abuse, might have entitled a mother to crowns in heaven once, but it only entitles her to a snappy bawling-out in the juvenile court now.

THE GOOD MOTHER OF 1929 IS SUPPOSED TO FIGHT FOR HER CHILDREN'S GOOD NO MATTER WHAT PAPA SAYS. And she has plenty of ammunition wherewith to fight. She has laws and officials behind her, jobs and courts at her command. If Jake Elliot won't help mamma keep Eddie in school, the authorities will help her—

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

THIS is simply another reflection of the fact which has already been stressed—that food-supply and excretion of waste products are not processes of immediate urgency, for they can be temporarily suspended without serious loss to the organism.

The respiratory function, on the other hand, is of immediate and critical importance; when necessity demands, other functions are neglected and all the resources of the circulation are concentrated on this one vital need.

H. G. Wells

It is clear, then, that the thoracic and abdominal organs are controlled and regulated to suit the ever-varying needs of the organism; moreover, we have seen that this control can be exerted in either of two ways—by means of nervous influence, or by means of chemical substances in the blood.

SECTION 2.
CHEMICAL MESSENGERS.

Chemical regulation as we have seen it operating through the carbon-dioxide in the blood, plays a very large part in securing the harmonious co-operation of our viscera.

Another example is afforded by the pancreas. This organ does not continually pour its digestive juice into the duodenum; it only produces it when there is food to digest in that part of the alimentary canal.

The mechanism by which the pancreas is suddenly activated at that particular moment is as follows: There are cells in the duodenum whose duty it is to secrete a particular substance, secretin, not into the digestive tube but into the blood. This they do whenever food passes from the stomach into the duodenum.

The secretin is distributed by the blood all over the body, and in most places it has no effect at all; but when it reaches the pancreas it stumlates that organ and makes it produce its digestive juice.

The process of secreting particular substances into the blood is called internal secretion and the various organs which do this are called ductless glands, or endocrines, from the Greek for internal secretions.

Many of the ductless (endocrine) glands produce their secretions continuously—we shall learn more about them when we are considering development and growth—but a few like the ductless gland cells in the duodenum, do so only at particular moments, and are used for regulating other organs.

Regulation by means of nerves is comparable to telephonic communication, because particular parts of the body are connected by definite nerve-fibres, and thus the nervous messages are sent only to the particular organs they concern.

As a further and very remarkable example of chemical regulation we may take the adrenal bodies—two small yellowish glands, weighing three or four grams each, and lying just above and in front of the kidneys.

They are made of two kinds of tissue, having quite distinct functions, the one forming a thick capsule round the other. It is within the central part that we are now concerned. This tissue is used in mobilizing the resources of the body to meet a sudden emergency.

In a crisis when everything depends on muscular exertion—on escape from an enemy, for example, or on fighting and winning—a nervous message is sent to these two glands, which promptly pour their secretions into the blood-stream.

This substance, adrenin, is swept round the body, and as it goes it affects different organs in different ways.

It speeds up the heart and dilates the capillaries, it stimulates the sweat-glands so that the body may be cooled, it slows the movements of the digestive organs and contracts their blood-vessels, it makes the liver shed its stored glycogen so that the muscles may have a copious supply of fuel, it stands the hair on end, dilates the pupil and bulges the eye, so that the individual may be terrifying to look upon—in fact, it is a chemical whip, a broadcast S O S, a tocsin which makes every organ play its part in the general mobilization.

SECTION 3.
MAN AND MOUSE AS INDIVIDUALS.

But, as everyone knows, the main unifying organization in the complex activities of Mr. Everyman is his nervous system.

So far we have been so busy inside of him, dealing with the details and problems of his continually more astounding mechanism, that we have given little heed to his behavior as a whole. We have preferred to study how he does it, before we even thought of what he does.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—There are innumerable first-class writers in New York who gnaw at the proverbial crust rather than suffer their efforts to be printed in any publication save the top magazines. They prefer living discomforts rather than occupying a second place in writing.

On the other hand, many talented writers of whom the world never hears make enough money to live comfortably, rear families and perhaps go to Europe for a few weeks each year. They have no high blown aspirations or desire for fleeting flame.

Writing, they feel, is a trade—like carpentry. Most of them have had their try at the big magazines and The Great American Novel, with the consequent disillusionments and are content with the skimmed milk. They may be known as "literary hacks" but they eat regularly.

Such free lances juggle an amazing diversity of writing jobs. They will dash off anything from a soup ad jingle to a short story for a theater program. They write for trade magazines, pot boilers for cheap fiction thrillers, Sunday page terrors and other odd literary marts.

Their output is stupendous. They become expert not so much in ideas or quality but in quantity. Certain formulas fit certain requirements year after year and they have only to employ them, work at high pressure and triple the wage of the average reporter.

Quite a number have press agent jobs on the side that require only an hour or so daily but providing the "meal ticket." Some have markets with certain syndicates for feature stories with pictures. These pay from $25 to $60 each and one lady made $6,000 from this source alone in a year.

Several fictionists write for a half dozen publications under various names—one expert has 11 fairly well known pseudonyms among the cheaper magazines. There is a fellow who maintained himself in an apartment in Paris for a year writing pithy three-line editorial paragraphs for a newspaper chain.

Berton Braley, perhaps is the best known, highest salaried and most prolific free lance poet. Eddie Guest, it may be explained, has a special market. Braley, as a vender of pale dreams, takes on all comers if they will pay his price. He writes calendar verse, frontis page sonnets, advertising jingles, syndicated poetical cheer, greeting card couplets—and now and then a book of poetry. He has been known to receive a poetical suggestion over the telephone and dash off the verse and deliver it before hanging up the phone. He thinks in rhyme.

Many pen and ink artists made hilarious contributions to theatrical back drops this season. Their exaggerated whimsicalities are in black and white and when unfolded usually get what Variety calls "a belly laugh." The chief conspirators have been Rube Goldberg, Peter Arno and Wynne.

* * *

Incidentally, a chain of restaurants and a department store front are boldly named and portrayed on two revue skit drops. It may be on the level but to most of us sillies out front appears to be cheap advertising.

* * *

Also it seems to me the screen should once in a while disassociate wealth from vice. A rich young man is almost invariably portrayed as idling through life, gulping cocktails and tossing diamonds hidden in bouquets over the footlights. Because they are not wastrels is why most rich young men are rich.

* * *

And while I think of it, if I were selecting the most graceful performance of any young actress on the New York stage this season it would be Linda Watkins in "June Moon." What a girl!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

THE janitor about your place, the charwoman who cleans your office welcomes kindness and courtesy from you. They may laughingly stand for your thrusts and jibes because they must, but it hurts just the same.

Personally, you may not have the right feeling or consideration for those who do menial labor. You cannot check the thought that they are inferiors. You have not the fineness that comes from generations of gentle breeding—you do not hesitate to hurt those you feel are beneath you. You do not consider the laboring man or woman as a human being to whom you should be kind. And if you try to assume a kind manner you are patronizing in a way that is not a credit to you.

Undoubtedly you have never tried to learn the warmth and happiness which kind words from you might bring to those who have never been able to reach the ladder leading to higher accomplishments.

Too many save their smiles and compliments for those who do not need them and who do not appreciate them.

Do you?
